U.S. Jets Hit Hanoi; Haiphong; 1 Downed

SAIGON (AP) — Guided by radar, U.S. Air Force fighter-bombers flew through overcast skies today to attack targets in the Hanoi area for the second day in a row.

"We have no operational reports yet," a U.S. spokesman said.

The North Vietnamese news agency said U.S. planes raided Hanoi and its suburbs and one American jet was shot down. Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported that residential quarters in the center of Hanoi were hit.

The radar-guided American warplanes attacked three vital targets around Hanoi and Haiphong on Wednesday, including an army barracks hit for the first time in the war. But the U.S. Command announced Communist gunners shot down a big four-engine C130 transport plane and three helicopters over South Vietnam, and an F105 Thunderchief fighter-bomber over the North.

One of the helicopters was a big U.S. Marine CH46 Sea Knight that was downed 11 miles northeast of the Marine fortress at Khe Sanh, in the northwest corner of South Vietnam. All 19 servicemen aboard the Sea Knight were killed, the U.S. Command said.

The F105 Thunderchief lost Wednesday was the 802nd U.S. warplane downed in combat over the North. The U.S. Command said ground fire brought it down over North Vietnam's southern panhandle. A "jolly green giant" helicopter made the 1,000th combat rescue of the war when it lifted the pilot, Capt. Gene I. Basel, 31, of Lakeside, Calif., from enemy territory unhurt.

The U.S. Command also reported that American casualties last week—470 killed and 2,675 wounded—were the second highest of the war, while Communist casualties totaled 5,769 killed, also one of the higher weekly tolls although not a record.

As the mopup after the Red offensive continued, South Vietnamese Army troops uncovered a mass grave containing about 100 bodies on the eastern outskirts of Hue today. Official sources said many of the victims had been executed and their bodies mutilated.

Fighting and enemy shelling continued in a 25-mile arc around Saigon.

Troops of the South Vietnamese 25th Infantry Division, aided by U.S. helicopter gunships, reported killing 125 Viet Cong 12 miles northwest of the capital in an eight-hour fight Wednesday. Government losses were put at five dead and 28 wounded.

The 25th Division has had the poorest reputation in the South Vietnamese army, and a new commanding general took it over six weeks ago.

Other South Vietnamese infantrymen launched a multibattalion operation 18 miles south of Saigon this morning against enemy troops menacing the capital from that direction. The government force reported 21 enemy and four government men killed.

Communist mortars for the second day attacked the South Vietnamese military academy five miles north of Saigon, at Thu Duc. A government spokesman said 40 rounds were fired into the camp and 10 houses were damaged, but no one was killed.

The Viet Cong also ambushed a U.S. truck convoy near Thu Duc early today, killing one serviceman and a Vietnamese civilian and wounding three Americans.

School Walkouts Grow Across U.S.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In Pittsburgh, Pa., a teachers union set up picket lines outside the public schools before classes began today, despite a court order barring a strike.

In Oklahoma, the state's 27,000 public school teachers called for a one-day protest walkout next week.

The strike by about one-third of Florida's teachers entered its ninth day amid conflicting reports on whether Gov. Claude Kirk would sign the state's controversial education spending bill.

And while Albuquerque, N.M., teachers voted to return to the classroom today after a week-long walkout, the 1,500-member San Francisco Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, summoned its members to decide whether to strike.

The San Francisco union executive committee recommended that if the vote is affirmative the strike begin immediately. In contention are some 90 union demands for improvement in classroom and teaching conditions.

The San Francisco school board refused Tuesday night to act on the union's request to enter immediate negotiations.

School officials in Pittsburgh said classes for 80,000 pupils in 116 schools would be held anyway with nonstriking teachers, administrators, substitutes and volunteers but conceded it would be "extremely difficult."

The dispute between the city and the Pittsburgh Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, is over the union's demand for collective bargaining. The rival 1,900-member Pittsburgh Teacher Education Association has said it would not support a strike.

Governors, LBJ Hold Crime Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the nation's governors are meeting today with President Johnson at the White House and discussing law enforcement and the economy with Cabinet members.

A State Department luncheon-briefing on the Vietnam war also was on the agenda, with Chairman Earle G. Wheeler of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, recently returned from the war zone.

The meetings were closed to newsmen.

Cloture Vote On Rights Bill Held Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen is moving to force a Senate showdown vote on a civil rights bill banning discrimination in sale or rental of most America housing.

A vote on Dirksen's petition to end debate—which needs two-thirds approval of those voting to carry—is scheduled for Friday.

Dirksen helped forge a Southern-Republican conservative coalition that twice earlier beat back bids to end the debate. He has since played a leading role in nailing together a compromise bill.

Dirksen defended his support of the open-housing proposal, past versions of which he has vigorously opposed, by saying Negro veterans returning from Vietnam "will be entitled to be integrated into the social and economic life of our country."

Referring to last summer's riots, he said the problems of the cities can't be solved without fairness in the field of housing.

Under the compromise measure, introduced just before the cloture petition, a ban on discrimination in the sale or rental of housing would take effect in three stages and—when fully effective—would cover about 70 per cent of the nation's housing units.

Beginning Jan. 1, 1970, home owners would be barred from discrimination in the sale of their property if they made use of a real-estate broker. They would be exempted from coverage only if they handled the sale themselves.

They would lose their exemption if, in sales advertising, they indicated racial or religious discrimination.

The first stage of the open-housing provision would take effect immediately and apply to housing financed with Federal Housing Administration or Veterans Administration guarantees, to public housing and to urban renewal projects.

In the second stage, the discrimination ban would apply to multi unit housing, effective Dec. 31, 1968. Financial institutions making housing loans and real-estate brokers would be covered at the same time.

6 Ohioans Die in War

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The Defense Department has issued the names of six more Ohioans who have died in the Vietnam war.

Two men killed in action were Army Spc. 4 James Corbis, son of Mrs. Hazel Caris, Dayton, and Marine Pfc. Frank A. Szymanski, husband of Mrs. Frank A. Szymanski, Cleveland.

Three Army men listed as missing to dead of hostile causes were Spec. 4 Ronald G. Johnson, husband of Mrs. Judith Johnson, Uhrichsville; Pfc. Richard M. Vasko, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred J. Vasko, Swanton, and Pfc. Robert D. Griffis, son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Griffis, Cincinnati.

Marine Pfc. James I. Miller, son of Mrs. Opal Drummond, Columbus, was listed as having died not as a result of hostile action.

Westinghouse Hit by Strike

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — About 4,000 employes of Westinghouse Electric Corp. here may be affected by a wildcat strike that erupted at the plant early today. Pickets of the International Union of Electrical Radio and Machinists, Local 726, were posted at the plant gates.

Union officials said they were trying to reach officers of the international union to make the strike official. Nearly all union members were reported honoring the picket lines in the dispute over suspension of two union members by the company last Tuesday.

Tax Breaks To Fight Slums Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's Commission on Civil Disorders will recommend that tax incentives be granted industry to enlist its aid in combatting unemployment in the slums.

Republicans in Congress have repeatedly advocated such a move, but their legislation has been firmly resisted by the Johnson administration and by Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., the House's strong man on tax legislation.

Sources disclosed the commission's tax incentive recommendation soon after the 11-member panel completed and unanimously approved its massive report o the riots that rocked the nation last summer.

The bulky document, to be issued this weekend, will be "uncomfortable for everybody, not just the government," said Gov. Otto Kerner of Illinois, commission chairman.

Under the commission's recommendation, tax incentives would be given industries that located plants in slums and depressed areas. Similar incentives would go to firms that undertook programs to train unemployed slum residents.

LIFEBOAT WITH REFUGEES RAMMED, MACHINE-GUNNED — The 292-foot Cuban cattle freighter 26th of July recovers the lifeboat it launched earlier, and savagely rammed and machine-gunned the small craft while the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Point Brown (foreground) and tug Chock (alongside the Cuban vessel) looked on helplessly. It is not known if the three Cuban refugees in the lifeboat were killed. The incident happened five miles beyond U.S. limits off the Virginia coast.

Air Cover Over Khe Sanh Provides Record Firepower

KHE SANH, Vietnam (AP) — Through the still, cold mountain air Marine outposts heard the sound of Soviet-built tanks clanking only a few hundred yards away.

Spotter planes had reported heavy troop movement all day. Marine officers here felt that at last the big battle for Khe Sanh was about to open.

Deep in his command bunker, Col. David E. Lownds called for massive air strikes "up tight," as close to the Marine lines as possible. North Vietnamese assault trenches have reached to within 100 yards of the encircled Marine base at some points.

Air Force B52s and jets together with fighter bombers of the Marines and Navy responded with a massive display of firepower, possibly the biggest single day in an air war campaign the Air Force said has already become the greatest single effort in history.

In all 2.48 million pounds of bombs, rockets and napalm were poured into the North Vietnamese defensive positions around Khe Sanh during last Monday's 24 hours. It included what one Marine called "the night of the bombs."

The sky was filled with rippling flashes as jet after jet dropped their bombs. Some of the strikes were so close to Khe Sanh's perimeter that the heavily sandbagged Marine bunkers jumped convulsively. Marines looked at their bunker's roofs and hoped the supports would hold. None failed.

During that one day, 19 B52's dropped up to 50,000 pounds of bombs apiece in the Khe Sanh area, and 279 smaller jets dropped 1,532,000 pounds of bombs.

The crucial hour of 4 a.m. passed with no attack. Generally major North Vietnamese onslaughts start before this time so they will not be caught in the open during day light.

The following night was one of the quietest Khe Sanh has known since two North Vietnamese divisions laid siege to the 5,000-man Marine base 14 miles south of the demilitarized zone one month ago.

If the North Vietnamese finally follow up their heavy shelling with determined ground assaults, it is air power that is supposed to give the Marines a needed equalizer during the battle. Marine artillery also has its role, but is probably more than compensated for by enemy siege guns, rockets and mortars.

Since the battle opened in January, more than 1,000 B52's have bombed the area, together with 10,000 individual strikes by smaller bombers.

Bond Issue Clears House; Pay Raise Hits New Snag

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Gov. James A. Rhodes' $750 million bond issue proposal cleared the Ohio House late Wednesday night but a snarl on legislative pay raises dimmed hopes for a session windup today.

Representatives debated more than two hours after day-long private conferences on the bond issue, and a Democratic amendment approved on the floor restricted revenue bond issue provisions to three areas of spending.

In other rapid fire developments, the Senate Judiciary Committee sounded the death knell to a controversial bill that would outlaw cash and merchandise giveaways such as those offered at service stations and supermarkets. Members said they needed more time for study.

Earlier, the Senate added its approval to a House measure creating an Ohio Water Development Authority to combat water pollution.

Under the bill, a seven-member authority could issue bonds for construction of pollution control facilities.

Senators gave unanimous approval to a bill that would permit an activated Ohio Building Authority to issue bonds for construction of state office buildings. Those bonds would be sold to the workmen's compensation trust fund and retired with rents paid by various departments using the facilities.

By a 29-0 vote, the Senate approved a House bill prohibiting sale, possession, or use of sawed-off shotguns and rifles. The bill provides stiff penalties -- 1-5 years for sale or transfer and 1-10 years for ownership or possession.

The measure must go back to the House for consideration of Senate amendments.

Senators agreed to House changes and completed enactment of three other bills. They

Discrimination Under Attack

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Two Negro state legislators from Cincinnati have launched a quiet attack on alleged racial discrimination by the prestigious Athletic Club of Columbus.

Reps. William F. Bowen and William L. Mallory, both Democrats, said today they began circulating a letter of protest Wednesday night and gathered 39 signatures of both representatives and senators.

The letter does not specifically ask the downtown club to open its membership to Negroes but it complains the name of its signers that:

"We have suffered extreme humilation and embarrassment when your rules have excluded Negro non-members from the same activities so accessible to Caucasian non-members."

Nixon Backers See Pullout Win for Him

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Romney has quit the Republican presidential race without a ballot cast—and the White House draft that New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has promised to answer could be taking shape now.

Rockefeller, most prominent cheerleader in Romney's hectic, fruitless 101-day quest for the GOP presidential nomination, said the wishes of his fellow Republican governors would be a major influence on his future course.

Many of those governors are in Washington today and Romney in withdrawing challenged them to forge a consensus behind some other candidate. The Michigan governor acknowledged he has not won rank and file Republican support. He suggested the governors look for another contender who might.

Romney thus admitted he had no hope of defeating front-running former Vice Presidet Richard M. Nixon for the Republican nomination.

Some Republicans were doubtful the governors' agreement Romney recommended could be achieved. But the pressure on Rockefeller clearly was rising. Rockefeller said once again that he is not a candidate for the nomination he has sought twice before, but that he would accept a draft if one came.

Would the New York governor enter the race against Nixon if his fellow governors urge that course upon him?

"Let me wait and talk to them," Rockefeller replied.

The New Yorker's emphasis on conferences to ascertain the wishes of his colleagues implied that a substantial bloc of gubernatorial support might meet his terms for candidacy.

Romney's startling withdrawal set off a political shock wave that rolled from New Hampshire to Oregon.

Campaigning for New Hampshire's March 12 primary, Nixon said Romney "will play a major role in Michigan and the nation in assuring the Republican victory in November . . ."

Strike Slated

DETROIT (AP)—Labor problems continue to plague the shutdown Detroit News and Detroit Free Press as the Pressmen's Union said Wednesday they would formally go on strike next week.

McNamara Leaves; Praise, Criticism Both Heard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert S. McNamara completes today a record seven-year tour as secretary of defense, praised by President Johnson as a "brilliant and good man" but with some of his basic policies under heavy attack.

The military brass, some of whom are not sorry to see him go, arranged a gaudy good-by for the 51-year-old McNamara, complete with a 19-gun artillery salute, band music, an honor guard of troops and a "fly-over" of war planes.

Somebody thoughtfully included in the fly-over three Air Force F111s, once called the TFX and symbols of one of the great unresolved controversies of the defense chief's administration.

McNamara, who received the Medal of Freedom from Johnson in an emotional ceremony Wednesday at the White House, was in line for another medal to be pinned on at the Pentagon ceremony.

He was expected to leave tonight for a two-week vacation in Aspen, Colo., before taking on his new job as president of the World Bank on April 1.

Waiting to step into McNamara's office was Clark Clifford, long-time Washington lawyer and political figure who will be sworn in Friday by Johnson.

Neither is McNamara's great monument.

McNamara's seven years, one month and eight days as Pentagon chief is a record that may stand for a long time. It eclipses the previous mark of four years, eight months and 12 days set by the late Charles E. Wilson in the Eisenhower administration.

Even his critics acknowledge McNamara achieved some brilliant reforms.

There is general acknowledgement that the fundamental alteration of the budgeting system and of management of the enormously complex Defense Department is McNamara's great monument.

McNamara and his associates also consider as his achievements:

—Enforcement of civilian control oover the armed services, none of the previous seven defense secretaries were able to apply to the same degree.

—The righting of what McNamara called a "terrible imbalance" in U.S. military strength in the 1950s heavily on the side of nuclear armament and light on conventional forces.

—The tailoring of military forces to fit U.S. foreign policy.

—The preeminence given to the cost-effectiveness technique to provide what he considered a rational basis for defense decisions in hardware, manpower and other fields.

—The institutionalization of budget and force planning five years ahead and the ending of the system whereby defense money was split almost arbitrarily among the armed services.

McNamara's opponents at the Pentagon and on Capitol Hill argued that time and events have shown his key policies to be wrong. Increasingly, McNamara has been at odds with Congress which, in his early days in the Pentagon, rarely dared challenge him.

Critics contend that:

—McNamara and his "Whiz kids" miscalculated in their assessment of the ability of the Communists to fight a prolonged war in Vietnam; that this calls into question the McNamara theory that wars can be kept limited and that by the gradual, measured application of force an enemy like the North

Westinghouse Hit by Strike

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — About 4,000 employes of Westinghouse Electric Corp. here may be affected by a wildcat strike that erupted at the plant early today. Pickets of the International Union of Electrical Radio and Machinists, Local 726, were posted at the plant gates.

Union officials said they were trying to reach officers of the international union to make the strike official. Nearly all union members were reported honoring the picket lines in the dispute over suspension of two union members by the company last Tuesday.

Tax Breaks To Fight Slums Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's Commission on Civil Disorders will recommend that tax incentives be granted industry to enlist its aid in combatting unemployment in the slums.

Republicans in Congress have repeatedly advocated such a move, but their legislation has been firmly resisted by the Johnson administration and by Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, DArk., the House's strong man on tax legislation.

Sources disclosed the commission's tax incentive recommendation soon after the 11-member panel completed and unanimously approved its massive report o the riots that rocked the nation last summer.

The bulky document, to be issued this weekend, will be "uncomfortable for everybody, not just the government," said Gov. Otto Kerner of Illinois, commission chairman.

Under the commission's recommendation, tax incentives would be given industries that located plants in slums and depressed areas. Similar incentives would go to firms that undertook programs to train unemployed slum residents.

Air Cover Over Khe Sanh Provides Record Firepower

KHE SANH, Vietnam (AP) — Through the still, cold mountain air Marine outposts heard the sound of Soviet-built tanks clanking only a few hundred yards away.

Spotter planes had reported heavy troop movement all day. Marine officers here felt that at last the big battle for Khe Sanh was about to open.

Deep in his command bunker, Col. David E. Lownds called for massive air strikes "up tight," as close to the Marine lines as possible. North Vietnamese assault trenches have reached to within 100 yards of the encircled Marine base at some points.

Air Force B52s and jets together with fighter bombers of the Marines and Navy responded with a massive display of firepower, possibly the biggest single day in an air war campaign the Air Force said has already become the greatest single effort in history.

In all 2.48 million pounds of bombs, rockets and napalm were poured into the North Vietnamese defensive positions around Khe Sanh during last Monday's 24 hours. It included what one Marine called "the night of the bombs."

The sky was filled with rippling flashes as jet after jet dropped their bombs. Some of the strikes were so close to Khe Sanh's perimeter that the heavily sandbagged Marine bunkers jumped convulsively. Marines looked at their bunker's roofs and hoped the supports would hold. None failed.

During that one day, 19 B52's dropped up to 50,000 pounds of bombs apiece in the Khe Sanh area, and 279 smaller jets dropped 1,532,000 pounds of bombs.

The crucial hour of 4 a.m. passed with no attack. Generally major North Vietnamese onslaughts start before this time so they will not be caught in the open during day light.

The following night was one of the quietest Khe Sanh has known since two North Vietnamese divisions laid siege to the 5,000-man Marine base 14 miles south of the demilitarized zone one month ago.

If the North Vietnamese finally follow up their heavy shelling with determined ground assaults, it is air power that is supposed to give the Marines a needed equalizer during the battle. Marine artillery also has its role, but is probably more than compensated for by enemy siege guns, rockets and mortars.

Since the battle opened in January, more than 1,000 B52's have bombed the area, together with 10,000 individual strikes by smaller bombers.

Athens County Motorist Dies

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Buchtel, Athens County, man is the latest reported victim of Ohio traffic.

The dead:

James E. Hotnit, 45, of Buchtel, Athens County.

Hotnit died in University Hospital in Columbus late Wednesday after being transferred there from a Nelsonville hospital. He was hurt when his car went out of control on Hocking County Road 24 a mile north of the Athens County line and struck a bridge.

Bond Issue Clears House; Pay Raise Hits New Snag

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Gov. James A. Rhodes' $750 million bond issue proposal cleared the Ohio House late Wednesday night but a snarl on legislative pay raises dimmed hopes for a session windup today.

Representatives debated more than two hours after day-long private conferences on the bond issue, and a Democratic amendment approved on the floor restricted revenue bond issue provisions to three areas of spending.

In other rapid fire developments, the Senate Judiciary Committee sounded the death knell to a controversial bill that would outlaw cash and merchandise giveaways such as those offered at service stations and supermarkets. Members said they needed more time for study.

Earlier, the Senate added its approval to a House measure creating an Ohio Water Development Authority to combat water pollution.

Under the bill, a seven-member authority could issue bonds for construction of pollution control facilities.

Senators gave unanimous approval to a bill that would permit an activated Ohio Building Authority to issue bonds for construction of state office buildings. Those bonds would be sold to the workmen's compensation trust fund and retired with rents paid by various departments using the facilities.

By a 29-0 vote, the Senate approved a House bill prohibiting sale, possession, or use of sawed-off shotguns and rifles. The bill provides stiff penalties -- 1-5 years for sale or transfer and 1-10 years for ownership or possession.

The measure must go back to the House for consideration of Senate amendments.

Senators agreed to House changes and completed enactment of three other bills. They

Discrimination Under Attack

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Two Negro state legislators from Cincinnati have launched a quiet attack on alleged racial discrimination by the prestigious Athletic Club of Columbus.

Reps. William F. Bowen and William L. Mallory, both Democrats, said today they began circulating a letter of protest Wednesday night and gathered 39 signatures of both representatives and senators.

The letter does not specifically ask the downtown club to open its membership to Negroes but it complains the name of its signers that:

"We have suffered extreme humilation and embarrassment when your rules have excluded Negro non-members from the same activities so accessible to Caucasian non-members."

Youngstown Man Dies of Burns

McNamara Leaves; Praise, Criticism Both Heard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert S. McNamara completes today a record seven-year tour as secretary of defense, praised by President Johnson as a "brilliant and good man" but with some of his basic policies under heavy attack.

The military brass, some of whom are not sorry to see him go, arranged a gaudy good-by for the 51-year-old McNamara, complete with a 19-gun artillery salute, band music, an honor guard of troops and a "fly-over" of war planes.

Somebody thoughtfully included in the fly-over three Air Force F111s, once called the TFX and symbols of one of the great unresolved controversies of the defense chief's administration.

McNamara, who received the Medal of Freedom from Johnson in an emotional ceremony Wednesday at the White House, was in line for another medal to be pinned on at the Pentagon ceremony.

He was expected to leave tonight for a month-long vacation in Aspen, Colo., before taking on his new job as president of the World Bank on April 1.

Waiting to step into McNamara's office was Clark Clifford, long-time Washington lawyer and political figure who will be sworn in Friday by Johnson.

McNamara's seven years, one month and eight days as Pentagon chief is a record that may stand for a long time. It eclipses the previous mark of four years, eight months and 12 days set by the late Charles E. Wilson in the Eisenhower administration.

Even his critics acknowledge McNamara achieved some brilliant reforms.

There is general acknowledgement that the fundamental alteration of the budgeting system and of management of the enormously complex Defense Department is McNamara's great monument.

McNamara and his associates also consider as his achievements:

—Enforcement of civilian control oover the armed services, none of the previous seven defense secretaries were able to apply to the same degree.

—The righting of what McNamara called a "terrible imbalance" in U.S. military strength in the 1950s heavily on the side of nuclear armament and light on conventional forces.

—The tailoring of military forces to fit U.S. foreign policy.

—The preeminence given to the cost-effectiveness technique to provide what he considered a rational basis for defense decisions in hardware, manpower and other fields.

—The institutionalization of budget and force planning five years ahead and the ending of the system whereby defense money was split almost arbitrarily among the armed services.

McNamara's opponents at the Pentagon and on Capitol Hill argued that time and events have shown his key policies to be wrong. Increasingly, McNamara has been at odds with Congress which, in his early days in the Pentagon, rarely dared challenge him.

Critics contend that:

—McNamara and his "Whiz kids" miscalculated in their assessment of the ability of the Communists to fight a prolonged war in Vietnam; that this calls into question the McNamara theory that wars can be kept limited and that by the gradual, measured application of force an enemy like the North

Probation Given 2 Couples In Service Station Theft

Mr. and Mrs. William Davis and Mr. and Mrs. Arley Frederick Moss, 20, entered pleas of guilty to grand larceny Wednesday in Pickaway County Common Pleas Court and were placed on three years probation.

The four were implicated in a daylight burglary of the Certified Service Station Sunday. They were apprehended in Chillicothe within an hour of the burglary and all of the money they had taken was returned.

All appeared in court on bills of information, waiving their rights to a grand jury hearing.

Also placed on probation was Randy Bradford McKirgan, 18, of Pancoastburg, accused of taking a front end of an automobile from Deercreek Auto Parts. McKirgan also appeared on a bill of information.

Donald Edward Palmer, also involved in the theft of the auto parts, was referred to Lima for a 60-day observation period.

Gas Co. Wins Safety Award

Columbia Gas of Ohio, Inc., the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. and the Ohio Valley Gas Co., have received the 1967 George S. Young Award for setting the best industrial safety record in the Columbia Gas System, Inc., it was announced Thursday, by C. R. Baker, Circleville manager for the gas company.

The safety award, named in honor of a former chairman of the board of the Columbia Gas System, has been presented annually since 1952, Baker said.

He pointed out that in winning the award, the more than 4,400 employes in the Columbia Gas System throughout Ohio, including Gas company employes from the Circleville area, worked more than nine and a half million hours during the year with only 24 injuries that resulted in lost working time.

Baker said that the industrial safety program is a part of an overall effort by the Columbia Gas System and the three Columbus-based gas companies to encourage and improve safety practices in all phases of its operation.

Nixon Backers

executive director of the Nixon campaign organization, said the Romney move was a concession in advance, "a great victory for Mr Nixon."

California Gov. Ronald Reagan said Romney's withdrawal has no effect on his own status—that of a favorite son but not a candidate for the nomination.

Reagan, in Sacramento, said he has seen no evidence that he might face a Republican draft. He said he thinks most Republicans are still undecided about who they want as a White House nominee.

And he said he does not think the governors will unite behind any candidate.

Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann of Nebraska said Republican governors have tried before and failed to reach agreement on a candidate. "I don't think they're going to be able to now," he said.

Amid the echoes of his withdrawal, Romney cheerfully shook hands and chatted at a Wednesday night reception for governors and members of Congress. Moments after his televised withdrawal statement, Romney was lounging in his hotel room, talking with Michigan congressmen. "I wouldn't have missed it for the world," he said of his futile campaign.

It cost $275,000 in New Hampshire alone, covered perhaps 50,000 miles in the United States, took him around the world to confer with foreign leaders.

It ended with his announcement of a decision reached Tuesday night in a room at the Ramada Inn in Boston. There, Romney and a handful of top advisers talked about the race, came to the conclusion it was going nowhere and agreed it was time to quit.

Stock List Widens Loss

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market continued a discouraged decline early this afternoon amid drab news at home and abroad. Trading was a little slower than on Wednesday.

Prices were lower from the start and gradually widened their decline. Losses outnumbered gains by almost 8 to 3.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off 1.1 at 305.9 with industrials off 1.8, rails off .5 and utilities off .4.

On the American Stock Exchange, gold mining stocks were active gainers in a declining market.

permit cities to levy an income tax up to 1½ per cent by a bare majority vote at primary and general elections (55 per cent now is required), authorize creation of scenic river areas to qualify for federal beautification funds, and authorize counties to contract for ambulances service.

The House completed passage of bills to:

—Authorize counties to issue hospital revenue bonds, affording immediate help for Oberlin, Willard, and Maumee Valley hospitals.

— Empower the presiding judge of a multi-judge municipal court to set vacation periods and provide for temporary replacements.

—Authorize the Ohio Supreme Court and appellate courts to appoint counsel for indigent defendants seeking appeals from felony convictions.

— Lower from 70 to 50 per cent of evaluation the tax assessment rate on goods manufactured in one Ohio county but stored in another.

— Allow school districts to issue anticipatory notes while awaiting initial proceeds from voter-approved tax levies.

— Permit local subdivisions to renew notes periodically after expiration of the five-year statutory limit--an act sponsors said will help Mansfield finance a parking garage now entangled in court actions.

Rep. Clarence L. Wetel R-34 Columbiana introduced a resolution asking for a study of alternate methods of financing the new state police and firemen's pension fund. It was created by consolidation of municipal funds throughout the state.

Red Cross Board Meets

Mrs. Roliff Wolford, executive secretary, reported acceleration of aid to servicemen and their families.

As man power in the Armed Services increases, the duties of Red Cross also increases through aid and counseling for the men and providing a liaison of communications for servicemen and their families.

Mrs. Wolford also informed the board that messages of emergency only can now be sent to Southeast Asia.

Other action taken by the board was to establish a Mother anl Baby Care Class. Two instructors will conduct the six-weeks course beginning April 15.

A budget committee was appointed. Named to serve on this committee were Howard Judd and Eddie Reynolds. Mrs. Wolford and Mr. Shockley will serve by virtue of the positions they hold as executive secretary and chairman of the chapter.

The court collected $196 in fines and bond forfeit res from five out-of-county motorists.

Viet Escalation, Tax Boost Linked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Any escalation of U.S. troop strength in Vietnam may reportedly generate an administration call for a tax hike even higher than its 10 per cent surcharge proposal before Congress.

Government officials emphasize they believe the current situation—and they stress current—requires at the very least a 10 per cent surcharge on individual and corporate income taxes.

Congress has been cool to the whole idea of hiking taxes and the administration has left the way clear to accept less than the 10 per cent proposal if necessary.

But any major increase in U.S. forces in Vietnam would force the administration to at least consider a higher rate. The reason: The cost of sending one man to Vietnam for a year is estimated at up to $40,000. If 50,000 more troops were authorized, the cost would be $2 billion a year.

Chairman Earle G. Wheeler of the Joint Chiefs of Staff conferred Wednesday with President Johnson amid speculation of increases in troop strength in call-up of reserves.

There was no official indication, however, of what course the administration would take.

In the present economic situation, one per cent of the surcharge means about $1 billion in additional revenues.

The last time troop strength was escalated, Johnson coupled his announcement with a formal request to Congress for the 10 per cent surcharge.

That was last Aug. 3, when Johnson authorized an increase of at least 45,000 men in Vietnam by the end of the current fiscal year, raising total strength to 525,000 men.

The men are being sent but taxes have not yet been raised.

The budget sent to Congress last month for the next fiscal year envisions a leveling off of both men and money for Vietnam. Any new escalation could break that budget before it even goes into effect.

Seek Jurors Not Opposed To Death

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP)—The prosecution asked Wednesday that 46 prospective jurors who oppose the death penalty be excused from the trial of an Ohio woman accused of stabbing to death her Army sergeant husband.

Twenty-one other jury candidates were dismissed by Judge Hiram Cancio after they said they opposed the death penalty on religious grounds.

Caroline O. Wilkins of Newark, Ohio, is charged with first degree murder in the death of her husband, Sgt. Wesley Wilkins Jr., at their home at Ft. Buchanan on Nov. 19, 1966.

Because the slaying took place on federal property Mrs. Wilkins is being tried in federal court and faces a mandatory death penalty if convicted. The laws of Puerto Rico specifically prohibit the death penalty for any crime, and if convicted Mr. Wilkins could be the first woman sentenced to death in the commonwealth.

Area Woman Named to Test Group

Mrs. William J. Richards of Canal Road has been named a member of the Family Test Group of "Farm Journal" magazine, according to Miss Gertrude Dieken, Women's Editor.

Mrs. Richards and her family are one of 500 member-families of the group. The families are selected for their special skills and interests in some phase of farming, homemaking or community work. They are located all across the country.

Family Test Group members help the editors of the national farm magazine by acting as a sounding board for editorial ideas, and by reflecting local opinions, problems and customs.

These families also test products, both on the farm and in the home.

Ashville Faces Cut in Budget

ASHVILLE — The Village of Ashville is facing its most serious financial problems yet, with the refusal of the County Budget Commission to certify the village budget for the year 1968. Council had anticipated no difficulty with the budget, since it was made up in the same way it has been for several years.

However the county officials reported that the state examiners have stiffened their rules and therefore the budget must not permit the General Village Fund to continue to operate in the red, and in fact must pay back all that has been overdrawn from all other funds this year.

Since there has been two full months of operation at the usual rate, the council faced the job of cutting the remaining 10 months down to the figure the Auditor said would be certified, $10,039, instead of the $33,-450 originally budgeted.

The possibility of an income tax as a source of revenue is being explored, Mayor Hartley said, but little is known about how this would be operated, or if it would be satisfactory with the residents.

Council is open to any suggestions that the village residents may wish to make. They wish to study all possible ideas, and request that any proposals to help solve this financial problem be put in the form of a letter so that the whole council can study each suggestion at their next meeting.

Nixon Backers

executive director of the Nixon campaign organization, said the Romney move was a concession in advance, "a great victory for Mr Nixon."

California Gov. Ronald Reagan said Romney's withdrawal has no effect on his own status—that of a favorite son but not a candidate for the presidency.

Reagan, in Sacramento, said he has seen no evidence that he might face a Republican draft. He said he thinks most Republicans are still undecided about who they want as a White House nominee.

And he said he does not think the governors will unite behind any candidate.

Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann of Nebraska said Republican governors have tried before and failed to reach agreement on a candidate. "I don't think they're going to be able to now," he said.

Amid the echoes of his withdrawal, Romney cheerfully shook hands and chatted at a Wednesday night reception for governors and members of Congress. Moments after his televised withdrawal statement, Romney was lounging in his hotel room, talking with Michigan congressmen. "I wouldn't have missed it for the world," he said of his futile campaign.

It cost $275,000 in New Hampshire alone, covered perhaps 50,000 miles in the United States, took him around the world to confer with foreign leaders.

It ended with his announcement of a decision reached Tuesday night in a room at the Ramada Inn in Boston. There, Romney and a handful of top advisers talked about the race, came to the conclusion it was going nowhere and agreed it was time to quit.

Stock List Widens Loss

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market continued a discouraged decline early this afternoon amid drab news at home and abroad. Trading was a little slower than on Wednesday.

Prices were lower from the start and gradually widened their decline. Losses outnumbered gains by almost 8 to 3.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off 1.1 at 305.9 with industrials off 1.8, rails off .5 and utilities off .4.

On the American Stock Exchange, gold mining stocks were active gainers in a declining market.

permit cities to levy an income tax up to 1½ per cent by a bare majority vote at primary and general elections (55 per cent now is required), authorize creation of scenic river areas to qualify for federal beautification funds, and authorize counties to contract for ambulances service.

The House completed passage of bills to:

—Authorize counties to issue hospital revenue bonds, affording immediate help for Oberlin, Willard, and Maumee Valley hospitals.

— Empower the presiding judge of a multi-judge municipal court to set vacation periods and provide for temporary replacements.

—Authorize the Ohio Supreme Court and appellate courts to appoint counsel for indigent defendants seeking appeals from felony convictions.

— Lower from 70 to 50 per cent of evaluation the tax assessment rate on goods manufactured in one Ohio county but stored in another.

— Allow school districts to issue anticipatory notes while awaiting initial proceeds from voter-approved tax levies.

— Permit local subdivisions to renew notes periodically after expiration of the five-year statutory limit--an act sponsors said will help Mansfield finance a parking garage now entangled in court actions.

Rep. Clarence L. Wetel R-34 Columbiana introduced a resolution asking for a study of alternate methods of financing the new state police and firemen's pension fund. It was created by consolidation of municipal funds throughout the state.

Red Cross Board Meets

Board of Directors of the Pickaway County Chapter of American Red Cross met Wednesday night at the chapter house. Chairman William Shockley presided at the regular monthly session.

Mrs. Roliff Wolford, executive secretary, reported acceleration of aid to servicemen and their families.

As man power in the Armed Services increases, the duties of Red Cross also increases through aid and counseling for the men and providing a liaison of communications for servicemen and their families.

Mrs. Wolford also informed the board that messages of emergency only can now be sent to Southeast Asia.

Other action taken by the board was to establish a Mother anl Baby Care Class. Two instructors will conduct the six weeks course beginning April 15.

A budget committee was appointed. Named to serve on this committee were Howard Judd and Eddie Reynolds. Mrs. Wolford and Mr. Shockley will serve by virtue of the positions they hold as executive secretary and chairman of the chapter.

No License Case Draws $100 Fine In Muny Court

Simon Adams, 27, Route 1, entered a plea of guilty before Municipal Court Judge Sterling Lamb Wednesday to charges of driving without a license. He was fined $100 and costs.

Rita Agin, 21, of 220 E. Main St., pleaded no contest to charges of reckless operation of her car. She was fined $50 and costs with $25 of the fine suspended.

Ted Herron, 18, of 457 Watt St. forfeited a $24 bond set on charges of improperly passing another car.

Viet Escalation, Tax Boost Linked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Any escalation of U.S. troop strength in Vietnam may reportedly generate an administration call for a tax hike even higher than its 10 per cent surcharge proposal before Congress.

Government officials emphasize they believe the current situation—and they stress current—requires at the very least a 10 per cent surcharge on individual and corporate income taxes.

Congress has been cool to the whole idea of hiking taxes and the administration has left the way clear to accept less than the 10 per cent proposal if necessary.

But any major increase in U.S. forces in Vietnam would force the administration to at least consider a higher rate. The reason: The cost of sending one man to Vietnam for a year is estimated at up to $40,000. If 50,000 more troops were authorized, the cost would be $2 billion a year.

Chairman Earle G. Wheeler of the Joint Chiefs of Staff conferred Wednesday with President Johnson amid speculation of increases in troop strength in the call-up of reserves.

There was no official indication, however, of what course the administration would take.

In the present economic situation, one per cent of the surcharge means about $1 billion in additional revenues.

The last time troop strength was escalated, Johnson coupled his announcement with a formal request to Congress for the 10 per cent surcharge.

That was last Aug. 3, when Johnson authorized an increase of at least 45,000 men in Vietnam by the end of the current fiscal year, raising total strength to 525,000 men.

The men are being sent but taxes have not yet been raised.

The budget sent to Congress last month for the next fiscal year envisions a leveling off of both men and money for Vietnam. Any new escalation could break that budget before it even goes into effect.

Seek Jurors Not Opposed To Death

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP)—The prosecution asked Wednesday that 46 prospective jurors who oppose the death penalty be excused from the trial of an Ohio woman accused of stabbing to death her Army sergeant husband.

Twenty-one other jury candidates were dismissed by Judge Hiram Cancio after they said they opposed the death penalty on religious grounds.

Caroline O. Wilkins of Newark, Ohio, is charged with first degree murder in the death of her husband, Sgt. Wesley Wilkins Jr., at their home at Ft. Buchanan on Nov. 19, 1966.

Because the slaying took place on federal property Mrs. Wilkins is being tried in federal court and faces a mandatory death penalty if convicted. The laws of Puerto Rico specifically prohibit the death penalty for any crime, and if convicted Mr. Wilkins could be the first woman sentenced to death in the commonwealth.

Area Woman Named to Test Group

Mrs. William J. Richards of Canal Road has been named a member of the Family Test Group of "Farm Journal" magazine, according to Miss Gertrude Dieken, Women's Editor.

Mrs. Richards and her family are one of 500 member-families of the group. The families are selected for their special skills and interests in some phase of farming, homemaking or community work. They are located all across the country.

Family Test Group members help the editors of the national farm magazine by acting as a sounding board for editorial ideas, and by reflecting local opinions, problems and customs.

These families also test products, both on the farm and in the home.

Ashville Faces Cut in Budget

ASHVILLE — The Village of Ashville is facing its most serious financial problems yet, with the refusal of the County Budget Commission to certify the village budget for the year 1968.

Council had anticipated no difficulty with the budget, since it was made up in the same way it has been for several years.

However the county officials reported that the state examiners have stiffened their rules and therefore the budget must not permit the General Village Fund to continue to operate in the red, and in fact must pay back all that has been overdrawn from all other funds this year.

Since there has been two full months of operation at the usual rate, the council faced the job of cutting the remaining 10 months down to the figure the Auditor said would be certified, $10,039, instead of the $33,450 originally budgeted.

The possibility of an income tax as a source of revenue is being explored, Mayor Hartley said, but little is known about how this would be operated, or if it would be satisfactory with the residents.

Council is open to any suggestions that the village residents may wish to make. They wish to study all possible ideas, and request that any proposals to help solve this financial problem be put in the form of a letter so that the whole council can study each suggestion at their next meeting.

Author Laurence Stallings Dies; Wrote of World War I

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Writer Laurence Stallings Jr., who died Wednesday was a living example of the theme of his World War I play "What Price Glory," says a retired Army Air Corps general, Merian C. Cooper.

"I knew him for 40 years. He had no legs and was in pain all the time, but I never heard him do anything but make light of it," said Cooper, now a Hollywood film director and producer.

The theme of Stallings' famous play, said Cooper, was that courageous "men don't talk about glory, nor do they talk about honor. They only die for those things."

Stallings, who wrote "What Price Glory" with Maxwell Anderson and wrote scores of Hollywood films in the 1920s, 30s and 40s, died at his West Los Angeles apartment of an apparent heart attack. He was 73.

Stallings fought and was wounded in 1918 as a young Marine officer in World War I and, 40 years later, wrote "The Doughboys," a popular history of the American expeditionary force during that war.

Despite the loss of his right leg he traveled the world as an editor and writer for Fox Movietone News, covering pre-World War II Europe and wars in Ethiopia and Spain.

He lost his second leg in 1946, also as the results of wounds suffered in France during the First World War.

Despite his artificial limb, he was called into the Air Force in World War II and served in England, Europe, Africa and the Middle East.

Retired as a lieutenant colonel, he returned to Hollywood, and among his later films, wrote "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon" in 1949.

Stallings was born in Macon, Ga., and graduated from Wake Forest College in North Carolina.

Chicago School Busing Plan Runs into Veto, Other Snag

CHICAGO (AP) — Half of a controversial school pupil busing proposal has been vetoed and the other half postponed by the Chicago Board of Education but busing advocates still see life in their project.

Hundreds of persons marched and carried signs as the board met Wednesday to vote on the plan, climaxing two months of public hearings, demonstrations and boycotts touched off when the board approved the busing concept in principle.

The proposal introduced in December was designed to relieve overcrowded inner city schools to some with vacant tion. The project proposed to transport 1,035 pupils from predominantly Negro, overcrowded schools t some with vacant classroom space in nearby white neighborhoods.

The section of the plan which was to affect parts of the Northwest section of the city was vetoed by a tie vote. A majority vote was necessary to approve the plan.

Despite the vote, several board members voiced hope that a compromise plan introduced Wednesday might be reconsidered at the board's next meeting March 13. The compromise would make the vetoed portion of the busing proposal voluntary.

The second section of the plan, affecting Chicago's South Shore area, was sent back to James F. Redmond, schools superintendent. The board directed him to work with residents of the South Shore to revise the plan and make it acceptable for implementation this fall.

The busing issue sparked a controversy similar to the uproar concerning the board's deliberations in 1965 over whether to retain Benjamin C. Willis as school superintendent.

Romania Rips Soviet Union At Party Meet

Demands Apologies For Condemnation Of Red China

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Romania today demanded apologies from the Soviet Union and other nations that have attacked Red China at the world Communist conference here and threatened to walk out if the apologies weren't forthcoming.

It appeared unlikely that any apologies would be made at the meeting of delegates of 66 Communist parties.

Romania also demanded an apology from Syrian Communists, who accused the Romanian government of following a pro-Israeli policy for nationalist reasons.

Romanian sources said the Bucharest delegation boycotted an East German speech Wednesday which criticized both China and Israel.

The organizers of the parley, which is supposed to be preparing for a full-dress world Communist conference in Moscow in November or December, had assured hesitant parties that there would be no criticism of the Chinese or other absent Communist parties.

Fifteen eligible parties, including those from North Vietnam and Red China, stayed away from the meeting inspired by the Soviets.

In a speech Wednesday, Soviet ideologist Mikhail Suslov accused Mao Tse-tung's supporters in Red China of refusing to cooperate with other Communist parties in "a joint offensive against imperialism."

He also accused the Chinese of persistently trying to disrupt preparations for the world Communist conference and said Mao had conducted a long slander campaign against the idea.

But Suslov assured the Chinese and other parties opposed to the Kremlin line that both in preparations for the conference and at the conference itself "there cannot be any condemnation from the Communist movement of any party."

Seek Cyclists In Cleveland Bar Slayings

2 Californians Among 6 Persons Hunted by Police

CLEVELAND (AP)—Two California youths, said by police to be members of the Hell's Angels motorcycle club, are among six persons being sought in connection with the slaying Wednesday of two men in a East Side bar.

Killed were James O. Tillet, 38, a white truck driver, and Roosevelt Brown, 38, a Negro factory worker.

Police said Tillet was shot in the head when he went to the aid of Brown, who was being beaten by a gang of leather-jacketed youths.

The two men were sitting at one of the bar at the Barto Cafe when members of the gang entered in twos and threes.

There were about 12 gang members--most of them bearded and wearing shoulder length hair--accompanied by three or four girls, police said.

"Most of the youths were of the Cleveland Chapter of Hell's Angels," a homicide detective said. "But two were from California and had come to Cleveland to organize the gang here."

Mrs. Mildred Williams, a barmaid, told police some of the gang played pool after entering the bar, but later started beating Negro piano player Robert Williams, 40, (no relation) when he jokingly told them he was a policeman.

Reports that the killings were indirectly linked with a feud between the Hell's Angels and a Cleveland gang called "God's Children," were discounted by police.

Police also denied that the killings had any racial undertones.

"We are treating it as a straight case of murder resulting from a bar room fight," a homicide detective said.

After raiding a building near the bar police found two shotguns, a rifle, motorcycle helmets and other equipment. The building was believed to have been used by the gang as its headquarters.

Romney Pullout Stuns Backers

By HARRY KELLY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — No one could really believe it at first.

"It's incredible," said a Michigan politician on Capitol Hill.

The rumor said George Romney was pulling out of the Republican presidential race even before the primary in New Hampshire, only 13 days away.

Sure, Romney was an underdog against Richard M. Nixon. He not only admitted it; he insisted he liked the odds.

Besides, who could believe that a man so persistent that he once used 34 balls until he knocked down all 10 pins in bowling would call it quits before the first vote was cast.

Romney did it.

As the rumor flashed through the capital, newsmen descended upon the hotel where Republican governors were gathering for a meeting.

They couldn't get to the governor of Michigan. He was in his room. Taking a nap.

The governor's son, Scott and a state trooper who guards Romney on the road, were in a room down the hall from Romney's. They would barely acknowledge that the governor had indeed called a news conference for some two hours later.

"Is the governor quitting?" a reporter asked.

"If he is, he didn't tell me," said Scott with a grin.

"Where's your mother?"

Another grin. "She is campaigning in Wisconsin."

Telephone calls were coming in, from supporters, and from newsmen, who wanted to know what was going on. They learned nothing, but in a little while Romney was awake and sending out letters to fellow GOP governors reporting what most of them knew, "My candidacy has not won the wide acceptance with rank and file Republicans which is essential to success."

He was bowing out before the New Hampshire primary, Romney said, because "this is a critical moment." He seemed to be saying that if the Republican governors wanted a candidate other than Richard M. Nixon they had better get moving now.

Then, wearing a blue suit, and a tie showing gold GOP elephants gamboling on a dark blue background, Romney strode out of his room and down the corridor past a sign which said in red letters: "Exit."

Walking rapidly, with a slight swagger, he reached a door to the huge room where a crowd of newsmen awaited his entrance, and stopped short.

The television cameras were live and Romney wanted to make his exit on cue.

"Three minutes, someone called.

"Good," said Romney. Killing time, he turned to talk to a reporter. He regretted nothing, he said. He particularly valued the experience of his trips, to the slums of the big cities, to Vietnam and to Europe.

"One minute, governor."

"No." Then, after a moment of thought, "I tried to reach him like the other governors, but he was out."

Did he get in touch with Nixon?

Romney shook his head, no.

Had he informed Nixon of his intention to withdraw?

Another shake of the head.

Then it was time. George Romney stuck out his jaw and walked out into the glare of the camera lights to tell the reporters what most of them had already heard:

"I have just informed the Republican governors by letter of my decision to withdraw as candidate for President of the United States.

B52 Lost Over Gulf Of Mexico

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — A B52 bomber with eight persons aboard was missing today after flying over a bombing range in the Gulf of Mexico just off the Texas Coast. No bombs were aboard, an Air Force commander said.

Carswell Air Force Base here said its plane should have returned to Fort Worth by 3:30, a.m. Last contact was 11:12 p.m. Wednesday eight miles south of Matagorda Island.

The Air Force has a bomb range on the island between Corpus Christi and Houston.

Col. Carlton L. Lee, commander of the 75h Bomb Wing here, said three helicopters, three fixed wing aircraft and a Coast Guard vessel entered the search for the bomber.

The theme of Stallings' famous play, said Cooper, was that courageous "men don't talk about glory, nor do they talk about honor. They only die for those things."

Stallings, who wrote "What Price Glory" with Maxwell Anderson and wrote scores of Hollywood films in the 1920s, 30s and 40s, died at his West Los Angeles apartment of an apparent heart attack. He was 73.

Stallings fought and was wounded in 1918 as a young Marine officer in World War I and, 40 years later, wrote "The Doughboys," a popular history of the American expeditionary force during that war.

Despite the loss of his right leg he traveled the world as an editor and writer for Fox Movietone News, covering pre-World War II Europe and wars in Ethiopia and Spain.

He lost his second leg in 1946, also as the results of wounds suffered in France during the First World War.

Despite his artificial limb, he was called into the Air Force in World War II and served in England, Europe, Africa and the Middle East.

Retired as a lieutenant colonel, he returned to Hollywood, and among his later films, wrote "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon" in 1949.

Stallings was born in Macon, Ga., and graduated from Wake Forest College in North Carolina.

Youngstown Editor And Publisher Dies

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP)— William F. Maag Jr., 84, editor and publisher of the Youngstown Vindicator founded by his father, died early today at his home following a brief illness.

He was widely known in newscountry and had been active in the American Society of Newspaper Editors and the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

RE-ENLISTED, KILLED IN ACTION—Julius C. (Corky) Foster, 27, who walked 300 miles from Welch, W. Va., to Camp LeJeune, N.C., last fall to re-enlist in the Marines, has been killed in action in Vietnam. He made the trip to demonstrate his support of U.S. policy in Vietnam. Photos show him resting (top) during his long walk, and (lower) being sworn in in Raleigh.

Chicago School Busing Plan Runs into Veto, Other Snag

CHICAGO (AP) — Half of a controversial school pupil busing proposal has been vetoed and the other half postponed by the Chicago Board of Education but busing advocates still see life in their project.

Hundreds of persons marched and carried signs as the board met Wednesday to vote on the plan, climaxing two months of public hearings, demonstrations and boycotts touched off when the board approved the busing concept in principle.

The proposal introduced in December was designed to relieve overcrowded inner city schools to some with vacant tion. The project proposed to transport 1,035 pupils from predominantly Negro, overcrowded schools t some with vacant classroom space in nearby white neighborhoods.

The section of the plan which was to affect parts of the Northwest section of the city was vetoed by a tie vote. A majority vote was necessary to approve the plan.

Despite the vote, several board members voiced hope that a compromise plan introduced Wednesday might be reconsidered at the board's next meeting March 13. The compromise would make the vetoed portion of the busing proposal voluntary.

The second section of the plan, affecting Chicago's South Shore area, was sent back to James F. Redmond, schools superintendent. The board directed him to work with residents of the South Shore to revise the plan and make it acceptable for implementation this fall.

The busing issue sparked a controversy similar to the uproar concerning the board's deliberations in 1965 over whether to retain Benjamin C. Willis as school superintendent.

Romania Rips Soviet Union At Party Meet

Demands Apologies For Condemnation Of Red China

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Romania today demanded apologies from the Soviet Union and other nations that have attacked Red China at the world Communist conference here and threatened to walk out if the apologies weren't forthcoming.

It appeared unlikely that any apologies would be made at the meeting of delegates of 66 Communist parties.

Romania also demanded an apology from Syrian Communists, who accused the Romanian government of following a pro-Israeli policy for nationalist reasons.

Romanian sources said the Bucharest delegation boycotted an East German speech Wednesday which criticized both China and Israel.

The organizers of the parley, which is supposed to be preparing for a full-dress world Communist conference in Moscow in November or December, had assured hesitant parties that there would be no criticism of the Chinese or other absent Communist parties.

Fifteen eligible parties, including those from North Vietnam and Red China, stayed away from the meeting inspired by the Soviets.

In a speech Wednesday, Soviet ideologist Mikhail Suslov accused Mao Tse-tung's supporters in Red China of refusing to cooperate with other Communist parties in "a joint offensive against imperialism."

He also accused the Chinese of persistently trying to disrupt preparations for the world Communist conference and said Mao had conducted a long slander campaign against the idea.

But Suslov assured the Chinese and other parties opposed to the Kremlin line that both in preparations for the conference and at the conference itself "there cannot be any condemnation from the Communist movement of any party."

Seek Cyclists In Cleveland Bar Slayings

2 Californians Among 6 Persons Hunted by Police

CLEVELAND (AP)—Two California youths, said by police to be members of the Hell's Angels motorcycle club, are among six persons being sought in connection with the slaying Wednesday of two men in a East Side bar.

Killed were James O. Tillet, 38, a white truck driver, and Roosevelt Brown, 38, a Negro factory worker.

Police said Tillet was shot in the head when he went to the aid of Brown, who was being beaten by a gang of leather-jacketed youths.

The two men were sitting at one of the bar at the Barto Cafe when members of the gang entered in twos and threes.

There were about 12 gang members--most of them bearded and wearing shoulder length hair--accompanied by three or four girls, police said.

"Most of the youths were of the Cleveland Chapter of Hell's Angels," a homicide detective said. "But two were from California and had come to Cleveland to organize the gang here."

Mrs. Mildred Williams, a barmaid, told police some of the gang played pool after entering the bar, but later started beating Negro piano player Robert Williams, 40, (no relation) when he jokingly told them he was a policeman.

Reports that the killings were indirectly linked with a feud between the Hell's Angels and a Cleveland gang called "God's Children," were discounted by police.

Police also denied that the killings had any racial undertones.

"We are treating it as a straight case of murder resulting from a bar room fight," a homicide detective said.

After raiding a building near the bar police found two shotguns, a rifle, motorcycle helmets and other equipment. The building was believed to have been used by the gang as its headquarters.

Romney Pullout Stuns Backers

By HARRY KELLY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — No one could really believe it at first.

"It's incredible," said a Michigan politician on Capitol Hill.

The rumor said George Romney was pulling out of the Republican presidential race even before the primary in New Hampshire, only 13 days away.

Sure, Romney was an underdog against Richard M. Nixon. He not only admitted it; he insisted he liked the odds.

Besides, who could believe that a man so persistent that he once used 34 balls until he knocked down all 10 pins in bowling would call it quits before the first vote was cast.

Romney did it.

As the rumor flashed through the capital, newsmen descended upon the hotel where Republican governors were gathering for a meeting.

They couldn't get to the governor of Michigan. He was in his room. Taking a nap.

The governor's son, Scott and a state trooper who guards Romney on the road, were in a room down the hall from Romney's. They would barely acknowledge that the governor had indeed called a news conference for some two hours later.

"Is the governor quitting?" a reporter asked.

"If he is, he didn't tell me," said Scott with a grin.

"Where's your mother?"

Another grin. "She is campaigning in Wisconsin."

Telephone calls were coming in, from supporters, and from newsmen, who wanted to know what was going on. They learned nothing, but in a little while Romney was awake and sending out letters to fellow GOP governors reporting what most of them knew, "My candidacy has not won the wide acceptance with rank and file Republicans which is essential to success."

He was bowing out before the New Hampshire primary, Romney said, because "this is a critical moment." He seemed to be saying that if the Republican governors wanted a candidate other than Richard M. Nixon they had better get moving now.

Then, wearing a blue suit, and a tie showing gold GOP elephants gamboling on a dark blue background, Romney strode out of his room and down the corridor past a sign which said in red letters: "Exit."

Walking rapidly, with a slight swagger, he reached a door to the huge room where a crowd of newsmen awaited his entrance, and stopped short.

The television cameras were live and Romney wanted to make his exit on cue.

"Three minutes, someone called.

"Good," said Romney. Killing time, he turned to talk to a reporter. He regretted nothing, he said. He particularly valued the experience of his trips, to the slums of the big cities, to Vietnam and to Europe.

"One minute, governor."

Had he been in touch with his principal supporters, New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller today?

"No." Then, after a moment of thought, "I tried to reach him like the other governors, but he was out."

Did he get in touch with Nixon?

Romney shook his head, no.

Had he informed Nixon of his intention to withdraw?

Another shake of the head.

Then it was time. George Romney stuck out his jaw and walked out into the glare of the camera lights to tell the reporters what most of them had already heard:

"I have just informed the Republican governors by letter of my decision to withdraw as candidate for President of the United States.

B52 Lost Over Gulf Of Mexico

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — A B52 bomber with eight persons aboard was missing today after flying over a bombing range in the Gulf of Mexico just off the Texas Coast. No bombs were aboard, an Air Force commander said.

Carswell Air Force Base here said its plane should have returned to Fort Worth by 3:30, a.m. Last contact was 11:12 p.m. Wednesday eight miles south of Matagorda Island.

The Air Force has a bomb range on the island between Corpus Christi and Houston.

Col. Carlton L. Lee, commander of the 75h Bomb Wing here, said three helicopters, three fixed wing aircraft and a Coast Guard vessel entered the search for the bomber.

By DEE WEDEMEYER (For Hal Boyle)

NEW YORK (AP) — Birthday remarks that dismay a woman over 29—or a man over 39:

"Why not look at it this way, Harry: nobody gets any younger."

"If we put candles on it, I'm afraid we'll have to get her a larger cake. Frankly, I think it would be more tactful if we left off the candles altogether."

"The last time we put candles on Harry's birthday cake it took him ten minutes to blow them all out, and he was so winded he had to stay home from work for three days."

"As your insurance agent, Harry, I think this is the proper time to review your estate program, and, by the way, we haven't revised your will lately, have we? You know there are some things we simply cannot afford to put off until tomorrow, aren't there?"

"Yes, Marge does look nice on her birthday. Five hours in a beauty shop can do a lot for any woman."

Looking at it philosophically, Harry, you've reached the perfect age—too old to be fired, too young to be retired."

"I'm glad you liked the card I sent you. It set me back two bits. I can remember when you could get a card like that for a nickel, can't you?"

"The boss used to take Marge for a three-martini lunch on her birthday, but this year he just sent a secretary out to buy her a single red rose. I guess he was terribly busy."

"On the way home tonight, Harry, better stop off and pick out a wheelchair. After 40, a fellow never knows when he may need one."

"She can tell you she's only 34 until she's blue in the face, but I know better. She got her 25-year pin last month, and that means —if she's only 34—that she started pounding a typewriter here when she was only nine years old."

"Instead of giving Marge and Harry each a radio on their birthdays, why don't we get everybody in the office to chip in a couple extra bucks apiece and buy him a toupee and her a facelift?"

"I brought you a crying towel, Harry. Give it back to me when you're through with it. I've cried into it myself every year since I hit 40."

"There is no sense in fighting against time, Marge. After all, you now have what men value most in a woman—wisdom and maturity. Some men, anyway."

"The store is fresh out of birthday greeting cards. Why don't you send Harry a sympathy card and I'll send him a get-well card? They're more appropriate."

"Jim, I hear it's Harry's birthday. You know how these old-timers appreciate a little gesture from us front-office brass. How about having someone in the personnel department hand him a cigar or surprise him with a new cushion for his swivel chair?"

"Cheer up, Marge. There's still some life in the old dame yet."

"There's always something to be grateful for. At least you still have your health, Harry—except for your ulcer and that slight touch of high blood pressure."

"Here's a crumb of comfort: While there are probably two billion people on eatrh who are younger than you, there are one billion people on earth who are that help put things in perspective?"

"Happy birthday, Marge! You never looked better."

"Happy birthday, Harry! All I hope is that when I reach your age I look just half as young as you do."

Senator Morse's Troubles

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Portland, Oregon — This is a strange state, politically speaking, refreshing in some respects, ornery in others. It demands of its Presidential primary candidates that they appear in person, not only in the more populous reaches of the green Willamette Valley, but out in the burning back country across the mountains. There has been a Republican trend of sorts going here ever since the G.O.P. won a majority of the State Legislature seats right in the middle of the Goldwater debacle of 1964. But the reason for Republican victories is that the party has put up good men in a State that goes for the man.

Mention of "the man" inevitably brings up the question of Wayne Morse. Old Wayne has been a Republican, an Independent, a Democrat, and, more recently, a dissident Democrat, a man who has inspired many hatreds. But he has always won on his reputation for speaking his own mind.

This year he appears to be in real trouble. Bob Duncan, an LBJ supporter on the Vietnamese War issue, is trying to wrest the Senatorial nomination away from Morse in the primaries, and the local polls say that Duncan is ahead at the moment by a few percentage points. Duncan is a formidable campaigner; he came within twenty-odd thousand of unseating Mark Hatfield in the 1966 Senatorial campaign. He will take "hawk" votes away from Morse, and some of the labor vote, too. Morse, depending on his name and on outside-the-state money, has neglected his own organization, which may give Duncan an opportunity to build up local support that will offset Morse's financial edge.

The fate that takes care of "fools, drunkards and the United States" may, however, come to Morse's rescue in the primaries. For, curiously, there is a third entry — Phil H. McAlmond, a Portland contractor, who got a taste of politics by supporting Duncan in 1966 against Mark Hatfield. McAlmond, like Duncan, is a hawk on the Vietnamese issue, so the votes he receives won't be votes that would normally go to Morse in a two-man race. In the polls McAlmond has a little more than ten per cent of the Democratic total, so he could be the spoiler for Duncan.

But if it turns out that he does ruin Duncan, it won't mean that Morse is out of the woods. The Republican nominee for the U. S. Senate, a thirty-five-year-old, take-charge attorney named Robert Packwood, has no great name.

But, with a colleague named Howell Appling, a former legislator now retired from politics, he has been quietly combing the State to turn up good Republican candidates for local office. This "find the man" project has been followed up by intensive training in the arts of filing for office, conducting pre-primary campaigns, and raising political money. This is something that the formal Republican Party organization has never done, and something, too, that Wayne Morse has neglected in favor of running a "surface" show for himself every six years. So, when the crunch comes next November, the "unknown" Bob Packwood could turn up with an army behind him where Morse has nothing but his name and an edge in the money needed to hire mercenary supporters.

Packwood has done his "find the candidate" work over the past couple of years on a non-idological basis, so the bickering over a possible Rockefeller "write-in" won't touch him one way or another. His appeal in the state could be the appeal which Nixon makes to the professionals over the C. S. as a whole, for he has a potential band of workers in place to put him over.

Whether the good organizer could beat the flamboyant Morse is a question that interests many people outside Oregon. There is undoubtedly a great deal of tolerance of Morse as a national "no" man, one who has the guts to stand up for even the most unpopular of causes. Packwood, however, sees some opportunism in what he says is Morse's sudden discovery that the private lumber and mill interests of Oregon have a case in their battle to keep the Japanese from cornering the available timber cut on U. S. Forest Service lands. Packwood is admittedly a long shot to beat Wayne, but, as he puts it, "they'll be sorry some day that they laughed at us."

Films Made Abroad

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Recently veteran director George Sidney was quoted in a trade paper as saying that future American musicals will probably be made in England.

This was depressing tidings for the Hollywood labor force, which has been hurting because of the unprecedented slowdown of production. Never has there been so little filming for so long. And no relief seems in sight.

Sidney's remark, of course, was partly aimed at publicizing his latest musical, "Half a Sixpence," which he said was helped by the proficiency of English technicians and the lower labor scale. The latter, plus the generous government subsidy, encourages American companies to shoot expensive films in England.

But I wonder if the five-year flood of British-made, American-financed films isn't reaching a diminishing rate of return.

The Academy Award nominations could be offered as evidence, if only of a superficial nature. You'll note that all five male nominees are Americans, whereas the Oscar race in recent years has been dominated by the likes of Paul Scofield, Peter O'Toole, Laurence Olivier, Richard Burton and Rex Harrison.

All of the nominated directors are Americans, in contrast to recent years. Of the five picture nominees, only "Doctor Dolittle" was filmed in England, and the majority of scenes were made in Hollywood and the Bahamas.

Of course, the academy voters may well be swinging back to a more provincial attitude after several years of sending the Oscars abroad. But those voters very often reflect the feeling of the American movie-going public, as they did in naming the immensely popular "The Sound of Music" as best picture of 1965 despite the deprecations of high-brow critics.

Could it be that the American public is satiated with British entertainment?

I'm beginning to think so. I find nothing unfriendly in this, admire the British and especially support them in their present plight. Nearly everyone agrees that the English are the world's best actors, and they have also proved to be the most imaginative directors in recent times.

But you can get too much of a good thing, especially if it has a foreign sound. For five years or more, Americans have been subjected to a steady stream of Oxonian, Cockney, Liverpudlian and other accents native to the British Isles. Is it any wonder that audiences welcomed the flat Midwest tones of "Bonnie and Clyde" and the Southern Drawls of "In the Heat of the Night"?

Speaking of Your Health

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I like to sleep with the windows wide open. I find that I get a better night's sleep when it's cool. My husband insists that the windows be kept closed because night air is poisonous and dangerous. Can this really be a health hazard?

Mrs. K. T., Illinois

Dear Mrs. T.: I have always believed that any marriage that lasts more than 20 minutes is a testimonial to the adaptability of a man and his wife. The conflict as to whether to eat Chinese food or steak, to watch television rather than go to a movie and to keep a window open or closed is somehow always resolved by the give and take of mature people.

Let me immediately tell you that night air is no more poisonous than day air because both of them are so completely polluted in every large city in America. The only time that night air is more dangerous than day air is if you live near a factory which is spewing ts filthy smoke into your windows during the night shift. Air is air, depending not on the time of the day but on the cleanliness and control of air pollution.

I never could quite understand the great need for some people to "freeze to death" at night. These same people are the very ones who bundle themselves up carefully during the day, wear scarves, hats, warm clothing fleece-lined boots and thermal underwear.

When nighttime comes some strange psychological disease overtakes them. After being so completely protected during the entire day women get into delicate nightgowns and men get into ill-fitting, baggy, thin pajamas and go to bed. First, however, they convert their bedroom into a homemade refrigerator and then proceed to freeze themselves into unconsciousness.

I don't mean to get involved in your marital happiness. Why don't you do exactly as I do. Tell your husband to learn to freeze with the window wide open as I have learned to do. I lost that battle a long time ago.

Many of the girls in my daughter's class have started to menstruate. My daughter, who is 15, has not yet begun and is somewhat embarrassed to admit it to her friends.

Can something be done to hasten this process? Is it a sign of ill health that it hasn't begun up until now?

Mrs. B. T., Georgia

Dear Mrs. T.: Young adolescents and teenagers whose menstrual period has been delayed are frequently embarrassed because they feel that this is a lack of physical maturity. It is not unusual for some children who are emotionally distressed by this to pretend that their menses has started. There may be some psychological value to this attitude though I do not recommend the falsification.

Normally, the menstrual cycle begins in the early teens. This is the end result of the interacting of all the hormones in the body and represents a most remarkable process.

Sometimes, for unexplained reasons, in normally healthy children, the process is either delayed or may even start very early. There are instances of severe hormone imbalance that may throw the entire process out of gear. In a youngster who is developing normally in all other aspects it should not be a source of concern that the menstrual cycle is delayed.

Undoubtedly every young lady of your daughter's age has been taught the meaning of menstruation and especially has been taught that there is nothing "dirty" or "unclean" about this most wonderful function of their body.

It might be wise to have your daughter speak to her own doctor so that she can learn that she really is not "different" from her friends. Occasionally the doctor may even try a series of well-chosen hormones to help start the process and to adjust its regularity.

Medical advice by friends is often gracious but unsound.

Letter To The Editor

EDITOR'S NOTE — We welcome letters to the editor. In order to be considered for publication, they must bear the correct name and address of the writer. Anonymous letters and those signed with the request that signatures be withheld will not be accepted for publication. Opinions expressed in this column are those of the writers and not necessarily those of The Herald.

Dear Editor:

It is with deep regret, and yet with high expectations that I write this short letter of appreciation to the Herald, it's staff and to the residents of Pickaway County.

As most people know, a Pastor's life is not his own: we dedicate our lives to the services of others and accept the vows of our church to, "Go where we are sent", after Ordination, as Jesus sent His disciples. Therefore my wife and I are going.

We will assume our new Pastorate at Philo, Ohio, on March 3, 1968 as Rev. Talmadge C. Gregory assumes the pastorate here coming out of retirement to at least fill out till Conference in June, the rest of the Conference year.

Pickaway County and it's residents, particularly, of the 3 churches I served will always have a warm spot in the hearts of the Bakers: We have had our victories and our defeats, we expected them when we came. We can rest assured our friends have been made, and will be kept, here in this community: new friends will be made in our new appointment. Memories of joyous times as well as times of tears will continue to bathe our souls as we continue in the Master's use.

We sincerely thank the Herald for it's co-operation and friendliness to us especially, the Church Editor, who has been so very patient and friendly at all times. Please hold a little spot of warmness we feel for you, One and All, in your hearts toward us, and rest assured we wish, Only the very "BEST" for Pickaway County and especially to the churches we served here for the past 20 months. Drop in and have a cup of coffee with us when passing through Philo, O.

The World Today

By BOB HORTON, AP Military Writer (For James Marlow)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara describes last week's congressional grilling over the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin incidents as "pure hell" but feels it was worth it from a historical standpoint.

Sources close to McNamara say he believes his controversial testimony on the naval engagement involving North Vietnamese patrol boats and two U.S. destroyers will be a valuable contribution to the historical record.

The incidents led to the first U.S. air raids on North Vietnam and prompted a congressional resolution which became, as interpreted by the administration, almost the equivalent of a declaration for waging war in Southeast Asia.

McNamara had in mind the long-range benefit of a full record on the incidents when he accepted a call by chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., and went before what he knew would be a generally hostile Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

McNamara could have refused to appear before the panel and contended there had already been adequate congressional inquiry at the time of the Gulf of Tonkin incidents.

McNamara, however, is known to have felt this would not have been "very graceful," even though he had only a few days left in his seven-year tenure at the Pentagon.

McNamara concluded in advance, it is said, that he would accomplish little short-term good by plowing again through the mass of administration evidence on the incidents—including classified evidence. Fulbright had before the hearings began—but believed the benefits would show in years ahead.

The result of his appearance was more than 62,000 words of testimony on the Gulf of Tonkin.

Defense officials contend McNamara proved the destroyers Maddox and C. Turner Joy were attacked Aug. 4, 1964 despite repeated and continuing statements by Fulbright and some other senators casting doubt on this.

Another issue subsequently raised by Fulbright was whether the U.S. overreacted or acted too hastily in ordering retaliators air missions.

To this question defense officials reply Fulbright was fully aware what response the United States was planning in 1964 and made no complaints at that time. Fulbright contends, however, he did not have adequate information at that time.

The Pentagon takes the position that one price of this latest searching public examination of the Tonkin episodes has been some serious breaches of security information.

For example, the controversy which boiled anew last week brought public disclosure of a secret naval message submitted in support of a contention that the U.S. Navy was supporting South Vietnamese bombardment of two North Vietnamese islands about the time of the attacks.

The message said U.S. destroyers in the gulf would demonstrate American determination to remain in that area following one Communist attack and possibly would draw North Vietnamese torpedo boats away from the South Vietnamese operation, known as 34A-Ops.

The Pentagon said the message never became an order.

But the Communists, now having the text of that message as well as the date and time it was sent, are capable of breaking U.S. codes which were in use then, Pentagon officials say.

U. S. codes have been changed since then, but officials say it does not take many instances of code-breaking to give the enemy information needed to crack whole systems of coding.

The Business World

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — It is interesting to note how France's suggestion to the United States that it raise the price of gold, at first denounced as meddlesome by outraged Americans, is now being considered openly and seriously.

Not perhaps by the Johnson administration—judged at least by official statements—but by banks, economists, magazines, financial experts, stock market analysts. All are treating the idea more logically than in their first, strident reactions.

Pierre Rinfret, economic consultant to American business, is offering "modest odds" that the price of gold will be raised prior to 1970. Dr. Paul Einzig of the Commercial and Financial Chronicle is willing "to stake my whole reputation" on a price increase.

To raise the price of gold, which is a U.S. prerogative, would of course benefit France because it has accumulated huge gold holdings, more than $5 billion by recent estimate. France's stand is clear for that reason alone.

The rationale of a gold price increase goes deeper however. If the amount of money in circulation among trading nations is restricted by the amount of gold in the world, how can world trade and commerce grow?

At present, the fact that the United States pegs the price of gold at $35 an ounce is the keystone on which is built the ratio of one currency to another. This permits them to trade with each other. But it is based on a limited amount of gold.

This is the broad problem. The immediate concern, however, is the U.S. balance of payments problem. This country is spending more abroad than is drawn here. Thus, dollars are put into the hands of foreign governments, and with these they buy our gold.

France, more than any nation, has followed this policy, for France believes the U.S. dollar is inflated, that it really isn't worth what we say it is. And so they take gold instead.

If trends continue, the remaining $12 billion of U.S. gold will be gone and the United States no longer will be able to back its pledge to foreign nations that any dollars they hold can be redeemed in gold. This could be disastrous.

Solutions are being sought in the following, or in combinations of them:

— End the balance of payments deficit by encouraging foreigners to spend more money here and cutting our own spending abroad.

— End domestic inflation so as to make American goods more attractive to foreign buyers and thus improve the balance of trade. This might require a tax increase and a cut in federal spending.

These solutions deal mainly with the immediate problem of the U.S. balance of payments deficit; they offer lih'le help in providing reserves for a growing world trade. But additional solutions are being considered:

— Simply tell other nations that the United States is going off the gold exchange standard, that no longer will gold be given for dollars. In effect, this would leave the dollar as the yardstick for measuring other currencies.

— Develop a system where the relative values of currencies fluctuated with each other. The nation with the poorest payments record would find its money slipping in relations to others.

— Substitute a new sytem of paying bills among nations, gradually phasing out gold and replacing it with credits administered by a multination group called the International Monetary Fund.

Nevertheless, the idea of increasing the price of gold seems to be in vogue at the moment.

Reagan Is Hit By Higher Taxes

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan says the Los Angeles County Assessment Appeals Board placed a "very unrealistic" property tax value on his Malibu Hills property.

The board on Tuesday boosted the assessed value of the property from $7,500 to $54,000, triggering about a $5,000 annual increase in property taxes Reagan will have to pay on the 54 acres. Asked about this later at a news conference, Reagan said "no one in his right mind" would put such a high assessment on the land.

According to Boyle

By DEE WEDEMEYER (For Hal Boyle)

NEW YORK (AP) — Birthday remarks that dismay a woman over 29—or a man over 39:

"Why not look at it this way, Harry: nobody gets any younger."

"If we put candles on it, I'm afraid we'll have to get her a larger cake. Frankly, I think it would be more tactful if we left off the candles altogether."

"The last time we put candles on Harry's birthday cake it took him ten minutes to blow them all out, and he was so winded he had to stay home from work for three days."

"As your insurance agent, Harry, I think this is the proper time to review your estate program, and, by the way, we haven't revised your will lately, have we? You know there are some things we simply cannot afford to put off until tomorrow, aren't there?"

"Yes, Marge does look nice on her birthday. Five hours in a beauty shop can do a lot for any woman."

Looking at it philosophically, Harry, you've reached the perfect age—too old to be fired, too young to be retired."

"I'm glad you liked the card I sent you. It set me back two bits. I can remember when you could get a card like that for a nickel, can't you?"

"The boss used to take Marge for a three-martini lunch on her birthday, but this year he just sent a secretary out to buy her a single red rose. I guess he was terribly busy."

"On the way home tonight, Harry, better stop off and pick out a wheelchair. After 40, a fellow never knows when he may need one."

"She can tell you she's only 34 until she's blue in the face, but I know better. She got her 25-year pin last month, and that means—if she's only 34—that she started pounding a typewriter here when she was only nine years old."

"Instead of giving Marge and Harry each a radio on their birthdays, why don't we get everybody in the office to chip in a couple extra bucks apiece and buy him a toupee and her a facelift?"

"I brought you a crying towel, Harry. Give it back to me when you're through with it. I've cried into it myself every year since I hit 40."

"There is no sense in fighting against time, Marge. After all, you now have what men value most in a woman—wisdom and maturity. Some men, anyway."

"The store is fresh out of birthday greeting cards. Why don't you send Harry a sympathy card and I'll send him a get-well card? They're more appropriate."

"Jim, I hear it's Harry's birthday. You know how these old-timers appreciate a little gesture from us front-office brass. How about having someone in the personnel department hand him a cigar or surprise him with a new cushion for his swivel chair?"

"Cheer up, Marge. There's still some life in the old dame yet."

"There's always something to be grateful for. At least you still have your health, Harry—except for your ulcer and that slight touch of high blood pressure."

"Here's a crumb of comfort: While there are probably two billion people on eatrh who are younger than you, there are one billion people on earth who are that help put things in perspective?"

"Happy birthday, Marge! You never looked better."

"Happy birthday, Harry! All I hope is that when I reach your age I look just half as young as you do."

The World Today

By BOB HORTON, AP Military Writer (For James Marlow)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara describes last week's congressional grilling over the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin incidents as "pure hell" but feels it was worth it from a historical standpoint.

Sources close to McNamara say he believes his controversial testimony on the naval engagement involving North Vietnamese patrol boats and two U.S. destroyers will be a valuable contribution to the historical record.

The incidents led to the first U.S. air raids on North Vietnam and prompted a congressional resolution which became, as interpreted by the administration, almost the equivalent of a declaration for waging war in Southeast Asia.

McNamara had in mind the long-range benefit of a full record on the incidents when he accepted a call by chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., and went before what he knew would be a generally hostile Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

McNamara could have refused to appear before the panel and contended there had already been adequate congressional inquiry at the time of the Gulf of Tonkin incidents.

McNamara, however, is known to have felt this would not have been "very graceful," even though he had only a few days left in his seven-year tenure at the Pentagon.

McNamara concluded in advance, it is said, that he would accomplish little short-term good by plowing again through the mass of administration evidence on the incidents—including classified evidence. Fulbright had before the hearings began—but believed the benefits would show in years ahead.

The result of his appearance was more than 62,000 words of testimony on the Gulf of Tonkin.

Defense officials contend McNamara proved the destroyers Maddox and C. Turner Joy were attacked Aug. 4, 1964 despite repeated and continuing statements by Fulbright and some other senators casting doubt on this.

Another issue subsequently raised by Fulbright was whether the U.S. overreacted or acted too hastily in ordering retaliatory air missions.

To this question defense officials reply Fulbright was fully aware what response the United States was planning in 1964 and made no complaints at that time. Fulbright contends, however, he did not have adequate information at that time.

The Pentagon takes the position that one price of this latest searching public examination of the Tonkin episodes has been some serious breaches of security information.

For example, the controversy which boiled anew last week brought public disclosure of a secret naval message submitted in support of a contention that the U.S. Navy was supporting South Vietnamese bombardment of two North Vietnamese islands about the time of the attacks.

The message said U.S. destroyers in the gulf would demonstrate American determination to remain in that area following one Communist attack and possibly would draw North Vietnamese torpedo boats away from the South Vietnamese operation, known as 34A-Ops.

The Pentagon said the message never became an order.

But the Communists, now having the text of that message as well as the date and time it was sent, are capable of breaking U.S. codes which were in use then, Pentagon officials say.

U. S. codes have been changed since then, but officials say it does not take many instances of code-breaking to give the enemy information needed to crack whole systems of coding.

Senator Morse's Troubles

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Portland, Oregon — This is a strange state, politically speaking, refreshing in some respects, ornery in others. It demands of its Presidential primary candidates that they appear in person, not only in the more populous reaches of the green Willamette Valley, but out in the burning back country across the mountains. There has been a Republican trend of sorts going here ever since the G.O.P. won a majority of the State Legislature seats right in the middle of the Goldwater debacle of 1964. But the reason for Republican victories is that the party has put up good men in a State that goes for the man.

Mention of "the man" inevitably brings up the question of Wayne Morse. Old Wayne has been a Republican, an Independent, a Democrat, and, more recently, a dissident Democrat, a man who has inspired many hatreds. But he has always won on his reputation for speaking his own mind.

This year he appears to be in real trouble. Bob Duncan, an LBJ supporter on the Vietnamese War issue, is trying to wrest the Senatorial nomination away from Morse in the primaries, and the local polls say that Duncan is ahead at the moment by a few percentage points. Duncan is a formidable campaigner; he came within twenty-odd thousand of unseating Mark Hatfield in the 1966 Senatorial campaign. He will take "hawk" votes away from Morse, and some of the labor vote, too. Morse, depending on his name and on outside-the-state money, has neglected his own organization, which may give Duncan an opportunity to build up local support that will offset Morse's financial edge.

The fate that takes care of "fools, drunkards and the United States" may, however, come to Morse's rescue in the primaries. For, curiously, there is a third entry — Phil H. McAlmond, a Portland contractor, who got a taste of politics by supporting Duncan in 1966 against Mark Hatfield. McAlmond, like Duncan, is a hawk on the Vietnamese issue, so the votes he receives won't be votes that would normally go to Morse in a two-man race. In the polls McAlmond has a little more than ten per cent of the Democratic total, so he could be the spoiler for Duncan.

But if it turns out that he does ruin Duncan, it won't mean that Morse is out of the woods. The Republican nominee for the U. S. Senate, a thirty-five-year-old, take-charge attorney named Robert Packwood, has no great name.

But, with a colleague named Howell Appling, a former legislator now retired from politics, he has been quietly combing the State to turn up good Republican candidates for local office. This "find the man" project has been followed up by intensive training in the arts of filing for office, conducting pre-primary campaigns, and raising political money. This is something that the formal Republican Party organization has never done, and something, too, that Wayne Morse has neglected in favor of running a "surface" show for himself every six years. So, when the crunch comes next November, the "unknown" Bob Packwood could turn up with an army behind him where Morse has nothing but his name and an edge in the money needed to hire mercenary supporters.

Packwood has done his "find the candidate" work over the past couple of years on a non-idological basis, so the bickering over a possible Rockefeller "write-in" won't touch him one way or another. His appeal in the state could be the appeal which Nixon makes to the professionals over the C. S. as a whole, for he has a potential band of workers in place to put him over.

Whether the good organizer could beat the flamboyant Morse is a question that interests many people outside Oregon. There is undoubtedly a great deal of tolerance of Morse as a national "no" man, one who has the guts to stand up for even the most unpopular of causes. Packwood, however, sees some opportunism in what he says is Morse's sudden discovery that the private lumber and mill interests of Oregon have a case in their battle to keep the Japanese from cornering the available timber cut on U. S. Forest Service lands. Packwood is admittedly a long shot to beat Wayne, but, as he puts it, "they'll be sorry some day that they laughed at us."

Speaking of Your Health

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I like to sleep with the windows wide open. I find that I get a better night's sleep when it's cool. My husband insists that the windows be kept closed because night air is poisonous and dangerous. Can this really be a health hazard?

Mrs. K. T., Illinois

Dear Mrs. T.: I have always believed that any marriage that lasts more than 20 minutes is a testimonial to the adaptability of a man and his wife. The conflict as to whether to eat Chinese food or steak, to watch television rather than go to a movie and to keep a window open or closed is somehow always resolved by the give and take of mature people.

Let me immediately tell you that night air is no more poisonous than day air because both of them are so completely polluted in every large city in America. The only time that night air is more dangerous than day air is if you live near a factory which is spewing its filthy smoke into your windows during the night shift. Air is air, depending not on the time of the day but on the cleanliness and control of air pollution.

I never could quite understand the great need for some people to "freeze to death" at night. These same people are the very ones who bundle themselves up carefully during the day, wear scarves, hats, warm clothing fleece-lined boots and thermal underwear.

When nighttime comes some strange psychological disease overtakes them. After being so completely protected during the entire day women get into delicate nightgowns and men get into ill-fitting, baggy, thin pajamas and go to bed. First, however, they convert their bedroom into a homemade refrigerator and then proceed to freeze themselves into unconsciousness.

I don't mean to get involved in your marital happiness. Why don't you do exactly as I do. Tell your husband to learn to freeze with the window wide open as I have learned to do. I lost that battle a long time ago.

Many of the girls in my daughter's class have started to menstruate. My daughter, who is 15, has not yet begun and is somewhat embarrassed to admit it to her friends.

Can something be done to hasten this process? Is it a sign of ill health that it hasn't begun up until now?

Mrs. B. T., Georgia

Dear Mrs. T.: Young adolescents and teenagers whose menstrual period has been delayed are frequently embarrassed because they feel that this is a lack of physical maturity. It is not unusual for some children who are emotionally distressed by this to pretend that their menses has started. There may be some psychological value to this attitude though I do not recommend the falsification.

Normally, the menstrual cycle begins in the early teens. This is the end result of the interacting of all the hormones in the body and represents a most remarkable process.

Sometimes, for unexplained reasons, in normally healthy children, the process is either delayed or may even start very early. There are instances of severe hormone imbalance that may throw the entire process out of gear. In a youngster who is developing normally in all other aspects it should not be a source of concern that the menstrual cycle is delayed.

Undoubtedly every young lady of your daughter's age has been taught the meaning of menstruation and especially has been taught that there is nothing "dirty" or "unclean" about this most wonderful function of their body.

It might be wise to have your daughter speak to her own doctor so that she can learn that she really is not "different" from her friends. Occasionally the doctor may even try a series of well-chosen hormones to help start the process and to adjust its regularity.

Medical advice by friends is often gracious but unsound.

NEW YORK (AP) — It is interesting to note how France's suggestion to the United States that it raise the price of gold, at first denounced as meddlesome by outraged Americans, is now being considered openly and seriously.

Not perhaps by the Johnson administration—judged at least by official statements—but by banks, economists, magazines, financial experts, stock market analysts. All are treating the idea more logically than in their first, strident reactions.

Pierre Rinfret, economic consultant to American business, is offering "modest odds" that the price of gold will be raised prior to 1970. Dr. Paul Einzig of the Commercial and Financial Chronicle is willing "to stake my whole reputation" on a price increase.

Films Made Abroad

By BOB THOMAS

AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Recently veteran director George Sidney was quoted in a trade paper as saying that future American musicals will probably be made in England.

This was depressing tidings for the Hollywood labor force, which has been hurting because of the unprecedented slowdown of production. Never has there been so little filming for so long. And no relief seems in sight.

Sidney's remark, of course, was partly aimed at publicizing his latest musical, "Half a Sixpence," which he said was helped by the proficiency of English technicians and the lower labor scale. The latter, plus the generous government subsidy, encourages American companies to shoot expensive films in England.

But I wonder if the five-year flood of British-made, American-financed films isn't reaching a diminishing rate of return.

The Academy Award nominations could be offered as evidence, if only of a superficial nature. You'll note that all five male nominees are Americans, whereas the Oscar race in recent years has been dominated by the likes of Paul Scofield, Peter O'Toole, Laurence Olivier, Richard Burton and Rex Harrison.

All of the nominated directors are Americans, in contrast to recent years. Of the five picture nominees, only "Doctor Dolittle" was filmed in England, and the majority of scenes were made in Hollywood and the Bahamas.

Of course, the academy voters may well be swinging back to a more provincial attitude after several years of sending the Oscars abroad. But those voters very often reflect the feeling of the American movie-going public, as they did in naming the immensely popular "The Sound of Music" as best picture of 1965 despite the deprecations of high-brow critics.

Could it be that the American public is satiated with British entertainment?

I'm beginning to think so. I find nothing unfriendly in this, admire the British and especially support them in their present plight. Nearly everyone agrees that the English are the world's best actors, and they have also proved to be the most imaginative directors in recent times.

But you can get too much of a good thing, especially if it has a foreign sound. For five years or more, Americans have been subjected to a steady stream of Oxonian, Cockney, Liverpudlian and other accents native to the British Isles. Is it any wonder that audiences welcomed the flat Midwest tones of "Bonnie and Clyde" and the Southern Drawls of "In the Heat of the Night"?

Letter To The Editor

EDITOR'S NOTE — We welcome letters to the editor. In order to be considered for publication, they must bear the correct name and address of the writer. Anonymous letters and those signed with the request that signatures be withheld will not be accepted for publication. Opinions expressed in this column are those of the writers and not necessarily those of The Herald.

Dear Editor:

It is with deep regret, and yet with high expectations that I write this short letter of appreciation to the Herald, it's staff and to the residents of Pickaway County.

As most people know, a Pastor's life is not his own: we dedicate our lives to the services of others and accept the vows of our church to, "Go where we are sent", after Ordination, as Jesus sent His disciples. Therefore my wife and I are going.

We will assume our new Pastorate at Philo, Ohio, on March 3, 1968 as Rev. Talmadge C. Gregory assumes the pastorate here coming out of retirement to at least fill out till Conference in June, the rest of the Conference year.

Pickaway County and it's residents, particularly, of the 3 churches I served will always have a warm spot in the hearts of the Bakers: We have had our victories and our defeats, we expected them when we came. We can rest assured our friends have been made, and will be kept, here in this community: new friends will be made in our new appointment. Memories of joyous times as well as times of tears will continue to bathe our souls as we continue in the Master's use.

We sincerely thank the Herald for it's co-operation and friendliness to us especially, the Church Editor, who has been so very patient and friendly at all times. Please hold a little spot of warmness we feel for you, One and All, in your hearts toward us, and rest assured we wish. Only the very "BEST" for Pickaway County and especially to the churches we served here for the past 20 months. Drop in and have a cup of coffee with us when passing through Philo, O.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

Time for Learning Comes Soon Enough

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who said she wished mothers would teach their daughters how to do a laundry prompted me to write.

There is nothing in the world I would like better than to teach my 19-year-old daughter just that. Three times in the last 6 years I have been able to get her close enough to the washer to explain how to sort clothes and operate the machine. She just stood and watched for a while, then her mind wandered off in a dreamworld of her own.

In other words, she couldn't care less. I have begged, pleaded, and tried to drive home the importance of knowing these things for the day when she'll have to do them herself.

So what do I do in a case like that? You can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink.

MRS. A.

DEAR MRS. A.: Your daughter is not a horse, but if she were, nothing could be gained by "making" her drink unless she was thirsty. When she gets "thirsty," no one will have to "lead" her to water. She'll go looking for it. In other words, when she needs the know-how she'll get it.

DEAR ABBY: Since my son was going to be out of the city, I asked my daughter-in-,aw and her 13-year-old son to have dinner at my home after church on Sunday. She accepted graciously.

On Saturday I made an apple pie, and I got up early Sunday morning and fried chicken. I planned to have whipped potatoes, buttered beans, salad and hot rolls. I also had ice cream on hand.

After church, as we were walking to the car, my grandson asked what I was going to serve. I told him fried chicken and lots of good things.

He made a wry face, then turned to his mother and said, 'Aw, gee, Mom, I want steak! Let's eat out!"

I longed to hear my daughter-in-law say, "No, grandmother has dinner all prepared, we'll go to her house." But instead she hurt me deeply by saying, "Steak DOES sound good. Let's eat out! It will be my treat." Then she whispered to me, "Mother, I know my philosophy is different from yours, but we all must learn to give and take in this life."

HURT GRANDMOTHER

DEAR HURT: It's difficult to believe that a grown woman could be so insensitive—unless, of course, she is simply ignorant. Perhaps one day she will elaborate on her "give and take" philosophy. It sounds to me as if she likes to "give" orders and "take" charge of all the decisions.

DEAR ABBY: I am 59 and have gone steady with Percy for 2 years. He is 60. We both love to dance. Last evening we went dancing and the place wasn't very busy. The music was good so Percy asked me if I cared if he asked one of the waitresses to dance with him. (He had never seen her before.) I said O.K., but I didn't like sitting there alone while they danced. Later on the husband of the waitress came in and she brought him over and introduced him to us. Then he went and sat at a table in the corner by himself.

Pretty soon Percy said to me, "Why don't you go over and ask the waitress' husband to dance?" So I went over and asked him, and he said the number they were playing was too fast, but if they played a waltz he'd dance it with me, so I went back to my own table, and Percy was gone. He was dancing with that same waitress again.

What I want to know is this: Do you think Percy was treating me with proper respect? Or am I old fashioned to be offended? Should I break off with him?

HURT

DEAR HURT: Percy was out of line and you should tell him to cut it out. He may cut YOU out instead, of course, but a woman has to be desperate for male company to put up with the likes of him.

Ferry Plies Ohio River At Gallipolis

GALLIPOLIS, Ohio (AP)—A ferry was in operation today to replace a commuter train which has been in operation between Gallipolis and Point Pleasant, W. Va., since the collapse of an Ohio River bridge near here Dec. 15.

The commuter train of the Penn Central Railroad has had few customers since the ferry went into operation last week. The railroad announced Tuesday night that the train would run at least through Wednesday. The train service operated at a loss even before the ferry was established, city officials were told.

Store Averse To Publicity; Thug Escapes

Cunning Holdup Told to Police 5 Hours Late

CLEVELAND (AP) — Parma police said Tuesday an Uncle Bill's discount store waited five hours to report a $23,500 theft because "they didn't want any publicity."

Capt. Leonard Benedict said a man posing as a Brinks, Inc. guard walked into the store Monday and told a secretary he had come to collect the money.

The secretary, Margaret Siedlecki of Parma Heights said she told the man he was early and he explained the schedule had been changed.

She told police the man signed for the money and seemed completely familiar with the store's security system.

Police said the imposter was wearing what resembled a Brinks uniform, cap, badge and a ring of keys on his gunbelt.

Fred R. Silverstein, vice president and general manager of the store chain, said the staff acted on his orders in not reporting the theft sooner.

"We prefer to wait after such matters to determine whether it will have detrimental effect on the store or firm," he said. "We don't like police talking to the newspapers, because police sometimes give out wrong information and misquote people."

Capt. Benedict said had the store called police immediately they might have been able to catch the thief.

"We are only three minutes away," he said.

By MIKE RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) —Last November the city began replacing that familiar symbol of street corner authority, the traffic cop, with civilians.

Now, four months later, the pioneering program is getting kind words from almost everyone.

It's saving money. The manpower-short police department can reassign patrolmen to other law enforcement tasks. Public reaction has been good. And both the traffic policemen and their civilian successors wax enthusiastic.

Mild dissent has come, however, from some downtown businessmen who like the idea of having a blue uniform and a badge out front.

Los Angeles once had 85 officers on full time traffic duty. Thirty-three have been replaced with civilians, who underwent two weeks training in traffic regulations and public relations.

They wear uniforms but carry no guns, are not sworn officers and have no authority to issue citations or make arrests. They can, however, file complaints like any other citizen.

Capt. Eugene C. Linton, commander of the department's parking and intersection control division, says it's the lack of arrest authority that has bothered some businessmen.

"Some are hesitant because it takes guns away from their area," he says. "But we feel they will realize that the only thing we've done is take the policeman off the corner and let him move around on foot or in a mobile unit. Generally, public reaction has been good."

A 20-year veteran of the force, Eugene Lee, who now is walking a beat after four years in the traffic division, comments: "The merchant used to be able to look out his window and see us standing there. Now that we're on the move we're just not as handy to some of them as we used to be."

The moving around is what some officers like best about the change. They say pounding a beat is not nearly as tiring—or as hard on the feet—as standing in one spot for hours.

The department saves money two ways with civilians. They're paid less, starting at $545 a month versus $677 for police. And it costs less to train them. Their two weeks of study compare with 20 for an officer.

How do the civilians like the work?

Jerry Rector, 24, tried it because "I like to work with people, and you sure meet them here."

Jerry and his twin brother George, who intends to join the group at the end of the current school term, were among 800 applicants for the 33 openings.

Some applicants were postmen who saw the job bulletin posted in the post office and others heard about it on television. Other applicants had previously applied as officers.

Rector intends to try for the regular force as soon as his six-month probationary period is finished.

The civilians wear blue-gray uniforms while policemen wear dark blue, and this has led to policemen laughlingly referring to the civilians as the "Confederates."

"You know what I mean," said one policemen, "The Blue and the Gray."

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

Time for Learning Comes Soon Enough

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who said she wished mothers would teach their daughters how to do a laundry prompted me to write.

There is nothing in the world I would like better than to teach my 19-year-old daughter just that. Three times in the last 6 years I have been able to get her close enough to the washer to explain how to sort clothes and operate the machine. She just stood and watched for a while, then her mind wandered off in a dreamworld of her own.

In other words, she couldn't care less. I have begged, pleaded, and tried to drive home the importance of knowing these things for the day when she'll have to do them herself.

So what do I do in a case like that? You can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink.

MRS. A.

DEAR MRS. A.: Your daughter is not a horse, but if she were, nothing could be gained by "making" her drink unless she was thirsty. When she gets "thirsty," no one will have to "lead" her to water. She'll go looking for it. In other words, when she needs the know-how she'll get it.

DEAR ABBY: Since my son was going to be out of the city, I asked my daughter-in-,aw and her 13-year-old son to have dinner at my home after church on Sunday. She accepted graciously.

On Saturday I made an apple pie, and I got up early Sunday morning and fried chicken. I planned to have whipped potatoes, buttered beans, salad and hot rolls. I also had ice cream on hand.

After church, as we were walking to the car, my grandson asked what I was going to serve. I told him fried chicken and lots of good things.

He made a wry face, then turned to his mother and said, 'Aw, gee, Mom, I want steak! Let's eat out!"

I longed to hear my daughter-in-law say, "No, grandmother has dinner all prepared, we'll go to her house." But instead she hurt me deeply by saying, "Steak DOES sound good. Let's eat out! It will be my treat." Then she whispered to me, "Mother, I know my philosophy is different from yours, but we all must learn to give and take in this life."

Abby, what do you think of this so-called modern philosophy?

HURT GRANDMOTHER

DEAR HURT: It's difficult to believe that a grown woman could be so insensitive—unless, of course, she is simply ignorant. Perhaps one day she will elaborate on her "give and take" philosophy. It sounds to me as if she likes to "give" orders and "take" charge of all the decisions.

DEAR ABBY: I am 59 and have gone steady with Percy for 2 years. He is 60. We both love to dance. Last evening we went dancing and the place wasn't very busy. The music was good so Percy asked me if I cared if he asked one of the waitresses to dance with him. (He had never seen her before.) I said O.K., but I didn't like sitting there alone while they danced. Later on the husband of the waitress came in and she brought him over and introduced him to us. Then he went and sat at a table in the corner by himself.

Pretty soon Percy said to me, "Why don't you go over and ask the waitress' husband to dance?" So I went over and asked him, and he said the number they were playing was too fast, but if they played a waltz he'd dance it with me, so I went back to my own table, and Percy was gone. He was dancing with that same waitress again.

What I want to know is this: Do you think Percy was treating me with proper respect? Or am I old fashioned to be offended? Should I break off with him?

HURT

DEAR HURT: Percy was out of line and you should tell him to cut it out. He may cut YOU out instead, of course, but a woman has to be desperate for male company to put up with the likes of him.

Ferry Plies Ohio River At Gallipolis

GALLIPOLIS, Ohio (AP)—A ferry was in operation today to replace a commuter train which has been in operation between Gallipolis and Point Pleasant, W. Va., since the collapse of an Ohio River bridge near here Dec. 15.

The commuter train of the Penn Central Railroad has had few customers since the ferry went into operation last week. The railroad announced Tuesday night that the train would run at least through Wednesday. The train service operated at a loss even before the ferry was established, city officials were told.

A second ferry boat is scheduled to go into operation this week. Both will dock on the Ohio side at Kanauga only a short distance downstream from the collapsed Silver Bridge.

The first ferry has been docking in West Virginia at Henderson at the southern bank of the mouth of the Kanawha River. A second landing in West Virginia will be across the mouth of the Kanawha River at Point Pleasant.

Follies Talent Search Underway by Guilds

PLAN PARTY — Mrs. Maynard Eaton and Mrs. David Schneider are planning the Kick-Off Party for the Hospital Guild's "High Fever Follies." Everyone is invited to try-out for this year's production to be held on March 28, 29, and 30.

Berger Hospital General Guild's "High Fever Follies" is going into its search for talent stages. Everyone interested in being in the production is urged to attend the Kick-Off Party at St. Philip's Episcopal Church Parish Hall 8 p. m. March 12.

The Cellar Dwellers will be playing and refreshments will be served.

Paritcipating in the show is open to any adult resident of Pickaway County. It is not necessary to be a member of a Hospital Guild to join the cast.

The producer from the Jerome H. Cargill Producing Organization in New York will be introduced, and rehearsals will start the folloing morning. Rehearsal of the girls' numbers will be held from 9 to 12 in the morning at the Lutheran Parish Hall, and the couples' numbers will be practiced at the St. Philip's Parish Hall from 7 to 11 in the evening.

Co-chairmen of the talent committee, Mari Eaton and Sue Schneider, are hoping for a large turnout at the talent party to ensure the Follies success.

If you have a special talent or a particular speciality number, contact either Mrs. Eaton or Mrs. Schneider. An audition will be set up with the director for your act.

Meanwhile, with only four weeks to go until opening night, work continues on the other phases of the Follies production under the leadership of Mrs. Robert McKelvey, Mrs. Roger Bennington and Mrs. Randolph Clark.

Committee chairmen are Mrs. David Schneider and Mrs. Maynard Eaton, talent; Mrs. David Gillispie, tickets; Mrs. Jasper Hedges, patrons; Mrs. Wayne K. Liberals Win Canada Vote

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada's Liberal government won its vote of confidence in the House of Commons Wednesday but still faces the problem of raising $550 million in revenues lost when the House killed a tax bill and triggered the crisis.

The House voted 138-119 for the confidence measure introduced by Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson to keep his government from being forced out by the snap vote Feb. 19 that took other Liberal leaders by surprise.

Members of the Conservative and New Democrat parties had demanded that the government resign after the tax measure was defeated 84-82.

'Doc' Blanchard Flying Missions From Thailand

BANGKOK (AP) — Lt. Col. Felix "Doc" Blanchard, former Army football star, is now flying fighter bombers out of Thailand and two of his teammates of the mid 40s are again on the same team.

Blanchard, who arrived in Thailand two weeks ago, is flying F105's from Korat air base, Northeast Thailand.

An Air Force spokesman said Blanchard had already "logged a couple of missions."

The spokesman would not be more specific or say whether Blanchard had flown missions over North Vietnam.

Also flying for the Air Force in Asia are Lt. Col. Max Minor, and Lt. Col. Arnold Tucker who were quarterbacks on the same Army team.

Follies Talent Search Underway by Guilds

PLAN PARTY — Mrs. Maynard Eaton and Mrs. David Schneider are planning the Kick-Off Party for the Hospital Guild's "High Fever Follies." Everyone is invited to try-out for this year's production to be held on March 28, 29, and 30.

Berger Hospital General Guild's "High Fever Follies" is going into its search for talent stages. Everyone interested in being in the production is urged to attend the Kick-Off Party at St. Philip's Episcopal Church Parish Hall 8 p. m. March 12.

The Cellar Dwellers will be playing and refreshments will be served.

Paritcipating in the show is open to any adult resident of Pickaway County. It is not necessary to be a member of a Hospital Guild to join the cast.

The producer from the Jerome H. Cargill Producing Organization in New York will be introduced, and rehearsals will start the folloing morning. Rehearsal of the girls' numbers will be held from 9 to 12 in the morning at the Lutheran Parish Hall, and the couples' numbers will be practiced at the St. Philip's Parish Hall from 7 to 11 in the evening.

Co-chairmen of the talent committee, Mari Eaton and Sue Schneider, are hoping for a large turnout at the talent party to ensure the Follies success.

If you have a special talent or a particular speciality number, contact either Mrs. Eaton or Mrs. Schneider. An audition will be set up with the director for your act.

Meanwhile, with only four weeks to go until opening night, work continues on the other phases of the Follies production under the leadership of Mrs. Robert McKelvey, Mrs. Roger Bennington and Mrs. Randolph Clark.

Committee chairmen are Mrs. David Schneider and Mrs. Maynard Eaton, talent; Mrs. David Gillispie, tickets; Mrs. Jasper Hedges, patrons; Mrs. Wayne K. NEW YORK (AP) — There was a busy buzzing beehive of activity on ABC Wednesday night as a number of talented English performers raced and roared around, furiously reviving Noel Coward's wartime comedy, "Present Laughter."

The vehicle, slight and genially satiric, showed its age a little but served nicely as an opportunity for Peter O'Toole to display his ability to handle a light, brittle line. Although from time to time the actor seemed to overdo things a little, the total result was a merry two hours of television entertainment.

O'Toole played a London matinee idol constitutionally unable to stop acting for a momet and with a special talent for getting involved with women. He was surrounded by an assortment of determined eccentrics. He tried to get out of the clutches of a predatory woman and also to prepare for a foreign tour.

The script could perhaps have been tightened a bit, but from start to finish the special Noel Coward touch was evident. O'Toole played one of those apparently sophisticated rakes who is at heart just a helpless male who must be protected by strong, motherly women.

Honor Blackman, once the nemesis of James Bond, played the attractive estranged wife of the actor with whom of course he was eventually reunited.

Lucille Ball, plugging her forthcoming motion picture in England now that the current season's production of "The Lucy Show" is finished, told a reporter for Variety that the format of her CBS series would change next season.

The trade paper quoted the star as saying that she plans to get those two children back into the series—the boy and the girl who were shipped off to school several seasons back and never heard from again. The locale of the series shifted from Connecticut to Hollywood. But when the children reappear, they will be the two Arnaz children, Lucie and Desi Jr, both in their teens.

Both of them, have appeared from time to time on the program, and young Desi has had considerable show business experience playing in a musical trio that includes Dino Martin, Dean's young son.

It may be that the success of NBC's New Rowan and Martin variety show, Lucy's direct competition, had something to do with her decision to revise and freshen up the show. On several occasions recently, a variety hour has matched and even pulled ahead of a long-playing comedy series in the ratings.

At the end of this week, ABC will drop the five-minute morning news summary by Marlene Sanders. Miss Sanders, network television's only woman with a news show of her own, has had the daily show since 1964. Before that, the late Lisa Howard presided over a five-minute news spot.

Recommended tonight: "Carol Channing and 101 men," 9-10 EST, special program with Walter Matthau and George Burns that was originally scheduled for November but postponed by a strike of network technicians.

2 Senators Urge Draft Law Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, saying a disproportionate percentage of draftees are killed in Vietnam, proposes a complete overhaul of the Selective Service Act—including a draft lottery intended to insure maximum fairness.

The Massachusetts Democrat proposed that 19-year-olds be inducted first and called for revisions of the system of deferments for students.

In another Senate speech, Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., also urged President Johnson to substitute lottery or random selection of draftees and to have younger men inducted first.

Kennedy introduced a bill containing many provisions rejected by Congress last year. They included:

—Random selection, with the specific plan to be set up by the President.

—Deferments of up to four years for students of colleges, junior and business colleges, apprentice and vocational programs.

—Discontinuance of the student postponement provision for at least a year whenever the monthly combat casualties for three consecutive months reach 10 per cent of the total number of men drafted each month. This would mean discontinuance during the Vietnam war, assuming the casualty rates there continue at the current level.

—Uniform national standards for interpretation by the 4,084 draft boards of induction laws.

"Accidents of geography should not determine who goes to war and who does not," Kennedy said.

—Discontinuance of occupational deferments except for those specified by the President.

OSU Researcher On Trek to North Pole

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A research associate at Ohio State University's Institute of Polar Studies is somewhere north of Point Barrow, Alaska, today on the first leg of a 3,200-mile trek across the frozen Arctic Ocean and the North Pole to Spitsberben, north of Norway.

It's an adventure of a lifetime for 35-year-old Dr. Roy M. "Fritz" Koerner, a native of England who has been with OSU's institute for the last six years.

Now he's on leave as a member of a four - man team en- "longest, coldest walk ever attempted by man—the most challenging journey left to man on this planet."

Dr. Koerner is no stranger to the condition's he'll meet on the long journey. He spent 1966 studying the snows of Antarctica for OSU's institute. His research on ice samples collected on the polar plateau of Antarctica is aimed at determining the metamorphosis of snow, how it changes to firn (year-old snow) and then to ice.

And at home waiting word of the expedition is Mrs. Koerner. A daughter was born to the couple Jan. 30, just before Dr. Koerner left to join his three companions. The three, all Britishers, are Capt. Kenneth Hedges, 32, a physician of the Royal Army Medical Corps.; 36-year-old photographer Alan Gill, and Wally Herbert, 32, the expedition's leader.

Koerner's part in the expedition will be to take "weather balance" studies by recording air, snow, ice and water temperatures, wind velocities, humidity and ice thickness.

The party left Point Barrow, Alaska, Feb. 23 on what is expected to be a 16-month journey. It hopes, when the ice breaks, to float on an ice island to the proximity of the pole, with probably long stays on ice floes when weather conditions demand it.

Mrs. Koerner says she hasn't heard from the expedition since it left Point Barrow, but hopes to keep in touch with her husband through relays from ham radio operators both in this country and England. The team plans to maintain communications with scientists of the Arctic Research Laboratory in Point Barrow.

Mrs. Koerner pointed out that much of the team's trek will be during the Arctic spring and summer and the adventures will have to cope with melting ice and drift, and will have to spend much of their time camped on the moving ice pack.

Seven drop zones along their route across the top of the world have been designated for dropping supplies from the air.

Herbert, the expedition leader, has been planning the journey many months. His calculations called for a party of four men and four teams of dogs to set out from Point Barrow and sledging with the aid of the pack-ice drifts over the North Pole to northwestern Greenland.

Besides scientific knowledge about the weather, the team hopes to learn more about the impact of such a prolonged journey on man himself, providing useful survival data for airline companies operating air routes over the North Pole.

At the time of year the party departed from Point Barrow the sun breaks through the Arctic night for about three hours a day. There are few patches of water and the ice is firm enough for sledging. But by June the ice will become slushy and the expedition plans to take its first long break in the journey, camping on an ice floe and allowing the drift to carry it slowly but steadily northward.

When the ice firms up again set off again by sled, continuing the trek for a few weeks until hard winter conditions and extreme cold sets in.

Then, the expedition figures to be within 150 miles of the pole, and because of absence of any daylight and the bitter cold, the team will set up camp for a long break on an ice floe to drift further northward.

The party expects to remain on the floe until the end of February 1969, when it takes to the sledges for the last leg of the journey across the pole. They expect to reach the coast of Spitsbergen about May 20, 1969.

RIOT LOOT TO BE AUCTIONED—Police Lt. Edward Hotchkiss of the police property division stands in the midst of some of the thousands of items stolen during last summer's bloody Detroit riots in which 12 persons lost their lives. The loot was to be auctioned to the public in several sales.

'Inept' Would Be Kind Word For Play 'Carry Me Back'

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK (AP)—A lot of adjectives, none favorable, fit "Carry Me Back to Morningside Heights," the Tuesday night arrival at Broadway's Golden theater. Inept might be the kindest of all.

The play, which Sidney Poitier directed but in which he does not appear, starts off with a likely notion for smartly topical satire: A young civil rights enthusiast decides to be a Negro's slave.

"I want to make up for 400 years of guilt," he announces upon barging in during a Keystone Kop chase which quickly establishes that any sociological comment will be in a spirit of farce-fantasy.

But playwright Robert Alan Aurthur's attempted putdown of the disheveled white nonhero twitchingly enacted by David Steinberg rapidly deteriorates into predictable turnabout gags about the cliches of interracial behavior and frantic efforts to find enough plot twists to spin one joke into three acts.

There's also considerable stress for mirth's sake upon the fact that the more-than-willing servant is Jewish. Even included is a telephone call to the Brooklyn momma that George Jessel invented.

Louis Gossett, as a law student who finds himself the sudden master of an unwanted serf, never manages to give the role a smidgin of credibility. When Aurthur turns to slapstick after running out of punchlines. Gossett can only be lithe and willing.

The rest of the cast functions with equally unrewarding determination. Cicely Tyson appears as a lass who finds her matrimonial plans hampered for a while by unsought thralldom; Johnny Brown drops by as a bus-driver who haunts liberal rallies looking for a slave of his own; and Diane Ladd debuts with more sincerity than skill as the downstairs blonde who falls for Steinberg.

UD Player Complains Of Racism

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A University of Dayton Negro basketball player said Wednesday he no longer gives "maximum effort" in games because he feels he has been discriminated against.

Rudy Waterman, a senior, said he has experienced discrimination from both teammates and athletic department officials.

His remarks came during a question and answer session following a student panel discussion on "Black Student Views of UD," part of a week-long program on "Crises in Black and White."

Other Negro students also complained of racial discrimination on the Dayton campus.

Waterman said he and Glinder Torain, another Negro player, would come off the bench as sophomores and juniors "and play our hearts out, saying that next year things would be better."

Waterman also charged that the coaches have failed to give him the pats on the back he said he needed for inspiration to play his best. He said he had tried to talk to Coach Don Donoher, but had gotten no response.

BEARING UP—The time of crisis doesn't seem to phase Canada's Prime Minister Lester Pearson as he strides to Parliament in Ottawa.

South Korea Forms Corps Of 2 Million Reservists

SEOUL (AP) — The South Korean government plans to organize a reserve corps of 2-million men to crush North Korean military provocations, President Chung Hee Park said today.

One million reservists will be armed by the end of this year, said Park, who predicted a further increase in North Korean intrusions across the border.

"If the reserve corps is well organized and mobilized effectively, we don't have to worry about an attack on South Korea by (North Korean Premier) Kim Il-sung's army," he told a meeting of the National Veterans Assocation.

South Korea, which has a 560,000-man army, became increasingly concerned about its defense after North Korean commandos tried to assassinate Park in Seoul and the North Koreans seized the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo last month.

North Korea has an army estimated at 400,000 men and a militia of one million men and women.

Outgoing Defense Minister Kim Sung-eun said today he had outlined the need for more modern weapons for South Korea's regular armed forces in a letter to Johnson and 117 other U.S. leaders asking for an increase in American aid. While not officially disclosed, that aid is believed to run $200 million to $300 million a year.

Kim resigned Tuesday because of the North Korean attempt to assassinate Park and the President named former Lt. Gen. Choi Young-hi to succeed him.

Court Won't Enter Powell Ouster Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Court of Appeals ruled today that it would not interfere with the exclusion of Adam Clayton Powell from the House of Representatives.

Powell, Negro Democrat who formerly represented the Harlem district of New York, was ousted from the House March 1, 1967, after an investigation into charges of misconduct as a member of Congress and taking an insubordinate attitude toward New York courts.

The three-judge appeals court panel said the courts cannot compel the House to seat Powell. But it added that this point falls into insignificance "alongside the blow to representative government were they (the courts) either so rash or so sure of their infallibility as to think they should command an elected co-equal branch in these circumstances."

On April 7, 1967, .S. District Court Judge George L. Hart Jr. rejected Powell's constitutional challenge to the House action and dismissed his suit requesting the courts to order that he be sworn in and seated.

Today's ruling contained slightly varying comments by the three judges, but all concurred in the decision that the subject was inappropriate for judicial consideration and that they should not go into the merits of the case.

Strand Africans at Mid-Bridge

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Four Africans have been stranded on a bridge over the Zambezi River for five days after being deported by Zambia and refused entry to Rhodesia.

One reason for the deportation was that they did not have identity papers, which is the same reason Rhodesia refuses them entry.

A government spokesman said here the men claimed to be Rhodesians and it was up to them to convince the Rhodesian authorities of this. Rhodesian border officials believe the men may be connected with African nationalist groups.

The men are reported in bad shape due to lack of shelter and food.

Court Won't Enter Powell Ouster Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Court of Appeals ruled today that it would not interfere with the exclusion of Adam Clayton Powell from the House of Representatives.

Powell, Negro Democrat who formerly represented the Harlem district of New York, was ousted from the House March 1, 1967, after an investigation into charges of misconduct as a member of Congress and taking an insubordinate attitude toward New York courts.

The three-judge appeals court panel said the courts cannot compel the House to seat Powell. But it added that this point falls into insignificance "alongside the blow to representative government were they (the courts) either so rash or so sure of their infallibility as to think they should command an elected co-equal branch in these circumstances."

On April 7, 1967, .S. District Court Judge George L. Hart Jr. rejected Powell's constitutional challenge to the House action and dismissed his suit requesting the courts to order that he be sworn in and seated.

Today's ruling contained slightly varying comments by the three judges, but all concurred in the decision that the subject was inappropriate for judicial consideration and that they should not go into the merits of the case.

South Korea Forms Corps Of 2 Million Reservists

SEOUL (AP) — The South Korean government plans to organize a reserve corps of 2-million men to crush North Korean military provocations, President Chung Hee Park said today.

One million reservists will be armed by the end of this year, said Park, who predicted a further increase in North Korean intrusions across the border.

"If the reserve corps is well organized and mobilized effectively, we don't have to worry about an attack on South Korea by (North Korean Premier) Kim Il-sung's army," he told a meeting of the National Veterans Assocation.

South Korea, which has a 560,000-man army, became increasingly concerned about its defense after North Korean commandos tried to assassinate Park in Seoul and the North Koreans seized the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo last month.

North Korea has an army estimated at 400,000 men and a militia of one million men and women.

Outgoing Defense Minister Kim Sung-eun said today he had outlined the need for more modern weapons for South Korea's regular armed forces in a letter to Johnson and 117 other U.S. leaders asking for an increase in American aid. While not officially disclosed, that aid is believed to run $200 million to $300 million a year.

Kim resigned Tuesday because of the North Korean attempt to assassinate Park and the President named former Lt. Gen. Choi Young-hi to succeed him.

Strand Africans at Mid-Bridge

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Four Africans have been stranded on a bridge over the Zambezi River for five days after being deported by Zambia and refused entry to Rhodesia.

One reason for the deportation was that they did not have identity papers, which is the same reason Rhodesia refuses them entry.

A government spokesman said here the men claimed to be Rhodesians and it was up to them to convince the Rhodesian authorities of this. Rhodesian border officials believe the men may be connected with African nationalist groups.

The men are reported in bad shape due to lack of shelter and food.

Richard E. Plum, Easter Seal Campaign Chairman for the Pickaway County Society for Crippled Children and Adults, has announced that a Pickaway County Easter Seal Kickoff Meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p. m. Tuesday, at Calvary EUB Church, corner of Mill and Washington Sts.

Guest speaker for the evening will be Mrs. Nell Davy, program consultant for the Ohio Society for Crippled Children and Adults Inc.

She is responsible for the medical and social case work as well as planning and clinic operation of the 33 clinics serving patients in 71 counties in Ohio. She attended Ohio University and Ashland College; she is a former teacher and served as a social case worker in the Ohio Department of Public Welfare.

In 1962 she was awarded one of three outstanding Career Achievements awards by the Business and Professional Women's Club of Mt. Vernon of which she is a past president.

Mrs. Davy has been responsible for the Ohio Society's summer speech clinic program which she initiated in 1956. This program succeeded in bringing speech therapy to rural counties where there were no therapists employed by the schools. Speech programs provided experience and fund for therapists who were entering graduate school as well as emphasizing the need for careers in speech.

As a volunteer she has served as president of the Knox County Society for Crippled Children, secretary and education chairman of the Knox County Cancer Society and representative director for the Tuberculosis Association.

Mrs. Davy has professionally written radio script, broadcast her own program and has written other short stories and professional articles, historic and human interest material as a hobby. She formerly wrote the column "Letter from Nell" in the Columbus Citizen.

Mrs. Davy is a resident of Utica.

The Pickaway County Easter Seal Teen Queen and Easter Seal Child will be introduced at this meeting also.

This will be a very informative meeting and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Water Eats Away At Ancient Nubia

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

ASWAN, Egypt (AP) — Nubia, remnant of an empire between Egypt and Ethiopia, is being eaten away by waters rising behind the new Aswan Dam.

The Nubians are a Negroid people long ago conquered by the Arabs. The territory where 50,000 of them lived in mud huts has been submerged by the waters forming Lake Nasser behind the dam, a major irrigation and hydroelectric project.

The Egyptian government has spent vast sums to help Nubians resettle in neat new villages at Kom Ombo, north of Aswan. Reclaimed farms have been distributed to some of them, but many are still waiting. Others have abandoned their new villages and gone to Cairo to work as porters or servants in houses.

Many acknowledge the efforts exerted to make them feel at home, but they often say they would prefer to go back to the beloved homeland. They entertain a hope that, once Lake Nasser takes a definite shape, they can go back and resettle on narrow strips of lush land on its banks.

Ethnological studies conducted by the American University of Cairo show that the Subians have abandoned many old ways of life but feel they are incongruously replanted in a new society.

Each family keeps a sack full of dust from the inundatel homeland. They are doing their best to make the new settlements look like the old villages. They seek variety instead of the uniformity of their stone-built houses. Many have added new floors, painted, redesigned and aderned their houses. They erected their own marketplaces.

Nubians stay aloof from Egyptian society and look down upon their neighbors as inferior and dishonest. They stubbornly forbid strangers to attend their private ceremonies.

Each village has revived its own tribal council, a lawmaking body to apply the tribal laws. Police are only called in dire emergencies. Drums convoke the councils once every full moon.

Witch doctors are still there, but their business is sagging. Nubians frequently resisted Egyptian doctors especially in cases of illness involving their females. Doctors from Aswan often had to obtain police support to enter Nubian houses to examine cases of serious illness. The government has finally assigned female doctors to deal with Nubian women.

The economic factor, however, dictates fresh traditions. The custom of holding seven-day mourning ceremonies for each death has been cut to one night. The bands of professional mourners have been abolished. Elaborate weddings have been trimmed to a minimum.

Polygamy is no longer in vogue, again for economic reasons. Marriage is strictly an intra-Nubian affair. Those who marry non-Nubians are considered outcasts.

AIRMAIL COMMEMORATIVE—This airmail stamp will be issued May 15 in Washington to commemorate the 50th anniversary of regularly scheduled airmail. The plane is the Curtiss Jenney flown on the Washington-New York run May 15, 1918. Colors will be black, red and blue.

Shoemaker Opposes Pay Increase for Legislators

Myrl H. Shoemaker, District 21, Ross and Pickaway County's Representative to the Ohio General Assembly, announced today that he strongly opposes Senate Bill No. 517 which was passed by the Senate and is now in the House of Representatives for scheduled hearings during the final week of the session.

Shoemaker noted that there was, in his opinion, considerable justification for a salary increase for judges and county officials, but that he was not in sympathy for any increased compensation for the lawmakers at this time.

In voicing opposition to this proposal, Shoemaker stated, "The legislature, it seems to me, has failed in its responsibility to provide adequate financial relief to thousands of individuals in this state. Legislation proposed this session to provide salary increases for deputy sheriffs and other peace officer, after receiving favorable consideration in the Senate, died in the House.

"Approximately five hundred state employees received only an additional two cents per hour, and another approximately five hundred received only a seven per cent hour increase as a result of recent legislative action. Certainly attention should be focused on these underpaid employees who are in real need of financial assistance. There has also been a failure, as of now, to provide adequate retirement benefits for state employees and provide additional public assistance for the aged who are facing rising inflation and cost of living expenses almost daily."

"The recent removal of the $25,000 salary limitation by the legislature as the final average salary in computing retirement payments was ill advised, and benefits only a handful of state employees already drawing top salaries.

"Further action in these underpaid areas," states Shoemaker, "certainly have priority over any increase in compensation for part-time legislators." Shoemaker pointed out that he is on record that before favoring any increase in compensation for members of the legislature, annual sessions of the legislature is a prerequisite. Although apparently recognizing this need, the membership shows no inclintion to implement it by law.

Shoemaker concluded his remarks by pointing out that members of the legislature "are still struggling, with apparently little chance for success, to provide some type of homestead exemption for our older citizens with limited or fixed incomes." He emphasized that, in his considerel judgment, serious attention to these problems would appear at the present to be far more important than any consideration of salary increases for part-time lawmakers who are required to meet only once in each two years.

Skill Improvement Program

By FRITZ F. JACOBS,
Superintendent

Last week we discussed the Title I Program of the Circleville City Schools in part, as it applies to the Health Care portion.

A second part of the program relates to Developmental Skill Improvement and consists of two parts, the continuation of library improvement and the summer school remedial program which is offered free of charge.

Formerly this program operated as a separate project but this year is combined with the Health Care program and is totally known as No. 310T68.

Essentially the program provides an opportunity to work in small groups or individually with children needing special attention and to better acquaint them with library procedures and to encourage them towards a more extensive use of both the school libraries and the public library. Further it provides the opportunity to continue our library improvement program at the elementary level. Library aides are employed to coordinate library procedures in the elementary schools and to process all of the books secured under Title II of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

Without this phase of library program improvement it would be next to impossible to process the books for timely use. The library aides and the secretarial help provided are essential to continued understanding by certain groups of students and the continued upgrading of elementary libraries.

The summer school program has provided a opportunity that previously only partially existed. Prior to the approved Title I program for this purpose, a tuition summer school was provided. Now it is possible to offer remedial courses in elementary education and secondary subjects according to need.

Last summer classes were offered at the elementary level grades 1-6 for 146 students and at the Junior High for classes in arithmetic, English, social studies, science and general math for a total of 57 students. A grand total of 203 students were served who might not otherwise experienced this opportunity. For many it meant the opportunity to proceed with their class and for others it provided the necessary remedial opportunity to do better work the following school year.

The basic objectives of the two programs are: 1. The remedial summer school will be offered for those students failing courses and needing credit to remain with class assigned. This usually represents the areas of greatest poverty.

2. To continue improved achievement level of reading skills and comprehension.

3. To continue to improve knowledge and use of library.
4. To continue to reduce retentions.

5. To continue to improve continuity of remedial opportunity.
6. To continue to individualize instruction to some extent.

Nicholas Drive PTA Slates Comedy Film

Nicholas Drive School Parent Teacher Assn. will present the movie "Have Rocket Will Travel" Saturday.

This film stars The Three Stooges: Curley, Larry, and Moe. The three play janitors at a rocket installation. They decide to help a beautiful woman scientist find a fuel strong enough to propel a rocket to Venus.

The three stooges inadvertently become the first men to reach another planet and return to tell about it. The gags in the movie come fast and furious to the delight of the small fry in the audience.

Doors will open at 12:45 and 2:45 for the two showings; at 1 and 3 p. m. The movie is 76 minutes long. Refreshments will be sold.

Police Seek Jail Escapees

CINCINNATI (AP)— A police hunt was being conducted today for two Cincinnati men who sawed their way through bars late Wednesday from the city workhouse.

Officials said Joseph Coldiron 31, and Douglas Smith, 24, stole a workman's saw.

Coldiron was serving a seven months sentence for disorderly conduct and family abuse and Smith was sentenced to 60 days for driving while under suspension.

Immigration Ban Eased In Britain

LONDON (AP) — Critics of the British government's bill limiting colored immigration claimed today to have won a major concession—agreement to admit any British citizens expelled from their native lands.

The bill cleared the House of Commons today after an all-night sitting and a debate lasting more than 15 hours. Approval in the House of Lords was expected later today, and the bill then goes to Queen Elizabeth II for her assent, the final step in the lawmaking process.

The bill allows the government to set an annual quota of 1,500 on immigrants who are British citizens but not born in Britain or the children of native-born Britons. The immediate target is about 100,000 natives of Kenya of Indian or Pakistani origin who retained British citizenship when Kenya became independent in 1963. Now they are being frozen out of business, trade and employment by new restrictions on noncitizens of Kenya.

Man Withdraws From Campaign

CLEVELAND (AP)— Casimir Bielin withdrew Wednesday from the Democratic primary in the 21st congressional district, leaving 17 candidates in the contest.

Other candidates said they had no intention of withdrawing from the primary. The district is 65 per cent Negro and efforts have been made by several groups to reduce the field.

A grand total of 203 students were served who might not otherwise experienced this opportunity. For many it meant the opportunity to proceed with their class and for others it provided the necessary remedial opportunity to do better work the following school year.

The basic objectives of the two programs are: 1. The remedial summer school will be offered for those students failing courses and needing credit to remain with class assigned. This usually represents the areas of greatest poverty.

2. To continue improved achievement level of reading skills and comprehension.

3. To continue to improve knowledge and use of library.

4. To continue to reduce retentions.

5. To continue to improve continuity of remedial opportunity.

6. To continue to individualize instruction to some extent.

Immigration Ban Eased In Britain

LONDON (AP) — Critics of the British government's bill limiting colored immigration claimed today to have won a major concession—agreement to admit any British citizens expelled from their native lands.

The bill cleared the House of Commons today after an all-night sitting and a debate lasting more than 15 hours. Approval in the House of Lords was expected later today, and the bill then goes to Queen Elizabeth II for her assent, the final step in the lawmaking process.

The bill allows the government to set an annual quota of 1,500 on immigrants who are British citizens but not born in Britain or the children of native-born Britons. The immediate target is about 100,000 natives of Kenya of Indian or Pakistani origin who retained British citizenship when Kenya became independent in 1963. Now they are being frozen out of business, trade and employment by new restrictions on noncitizens of Kenya.

Man Withdraws From Campaign

CLEVELAND (AP)— Casimir Bielin withdrew Wednesday from the Democratic primary in the 21st congressional district, leaving 17 candidates in the contest.

Other candidates said they had no intention of withdrawing from the primary. The district is 65 per cent Negro and efforts have been made by several groups to reduce the field.

ASWAN, Egypt (AP) — Nubia, remnant of an empire between Egypt and Ethiopia, is being eaten away by waters rising behind the new Aswan Dam.

The Nubians are a Negroid people long ago conquered by the Arabs. The territory where 50,000 of them lived in mud huts has been submerged by the waters forming Lake Nasser behind the dam, a major irrigation and hydroelectric project.

The Egyptian government has spent vast sums to help Nubians resettle in neat new villages at Kom Ombo, north of Aswan. Reclaimed farms have been distributed to some of them, but many are still waiting. Others have abandoned their new villages and gone to Cairo to work as porters or servants in houses.

Many acknowledge the efforts exerted to make them feel at home, but they often say they would prefer to go back to the beloved homeland. They entertain a hope that, once Lake Nasser takes a definite shape, they can go back and resettle on narrow strips of lush land on its banks.

Ethnological studies conducted by the American University of Cairo show that the Subians have abandoned many old ways of life but feel they are incongruously replanted in a new society.

Each family keeps a sack full of dust from the inundatel homeland. They are doing their best to make the new settlements look like the old villages. They seek variety instead of the uniformity of their stone-built houses. Many have added new floors, painted, redesigned and adorned their houses. They erected their own marketplaces.

Nubians stay aloof from Egyptian society and look down upon their neighbors as inferior and dishonest. They stubbornly forbid strangers to attend their private ceremonies.

Each village has revived its own tribal council, a lawmaking body to apply the tribal laws. Police are only called in dire emergencies. Drums convoke the councils once every full moon.

Witch doctors are still there, but their business is sagging. Nubians frequently resisted Egyptian doctors especially in cases of illness involving their females. Doctors from Aswan often had to obtain police support to enter Nubian houses to examine cases of serious illness. The government has finally assigned female doctors to deal with Nubian women.

The economic factor, however, dictates fresh traditions. The custom of holding seven-day mourning ceremonies for each death has been cut to one night. The bands of professional mourners have been abolished. Elaborate weddings have been trimmed to a minimum.

Polygamy is no longer in vogue, again for economic reasons. Marriage is strictly an intra-Nubian affair. Those who marry non-Nubians are considered outcasts.

Nicholas Drive PTA Slates Comedy Film

Nicholas Drive School Parent Teacher Assn. will present the movie "Have Rocket Will Travel" Saturday.

This film stars The Three Stooges: Curley, Larry, and Moe. The three play janitors at a rocket installation. They decide to help a beautiful woman scientist find a fuel strong enough to propel a rocket to Venus.

The three stooges inadvertently become the first men to reach another planet and return to tell about it. The gags in the movie come fast and furious to the delight of the small fry in the audience.

Doors will open at 12:45 and 2:45 for the two showings; at 1 and 3 p. m. The movie is 76 minutes long. Refreshments will be sold.

Police Seek Jail Escapees

CINCINNATI (AP)— A police hunt was being conducted today for two Cincinnati men who sawed their way through bars late Wednesday from the city workhouse.

Officials said Joseph Coldiron 31, and Douglas Smith, 24, stole a workman's saw.

Coldiron was serving a seven months sentence for disorderly conduct and family abuse and Smith was sentenced to 60 days for driving while under suspension.

PIGS SQUEAL ON TRUCK THIEVES—Workmen unload the vehicle (top, left) after the stolen truck with 13 pigs aboard was involved in an accident on Route 128 near Lexington, Mass. Lower, one of the giant porkers that escaped is herded back to the truck by a state trooper and a workman.

Humphrey Plans Visit to Toledo

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Vice President Hubert M. Humphrey is planning a May visit to Toledo, Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, said Wednesday. The exact date was not known.

Ashley said Humphrey's visit will be to review plans and help promote efforts to create summer jobs and recreational opportunities for out-of-school youths in the Toledo area.

Shoemaker Opposes Pay Increase for Legislators

Myrl H. Shoemaker, District 21, Ross and Pickaway County's Representative to the Ohio General Assembly, announced today that he strongly opposes Senate Bill No. 517 which was passed by the Senate and is now in the House of Representatives for scheduled hearings during the final week of the session.

The bill seeks to increase compensation for members of the General Assembly, judges, and statutory county officials.

Shoemaker noted that there was, in his opinion, considerable justification for a salary increase for judges and county officials, but that he was not in sympathy for any increased compensation for the lawmakers at this time.

In voicing opposition to this proposal, Shoemaker stated, "The legislature, it seems to me, has failed in its responsibility to provide adequate financial relief to thousands of individuals in this state. Legislation proposed this session to provide salary increases for deputy sheriffs and other peace officer, after receiving favorable consideration in the Senate, died in the House.

"Approximately five hundred state employees received only an additional two cents per hour, and another approximately five hundred received only a seven per cent hour increase as a result of recent legislative action. Certainly attention should be focused on these underpaid employees who are in real need of financial assistance. There has also been a failure, as of now, to provide adequate retirement benefits for state employees and provide additional public assistance for the aged who are facing rising inflation and cost of living expenses almost daily."

"The recent removal of the $25,000 salary limitation by the legislature as the final average salary in computing retirement payments was ill advised, and benefits only a handful of state employees already drawing top salaries.

"Further action in these underpaid areas," states Shoemaker, "certainly have priority over any increase in compensation for part-time legislators." Shoemaker pointed out that he is on record that before favoring any increase in compensation for members of the legislature, annual sessions of the legislature is a prerequisite. Although apparently recognizing this need, the membership shows no inclination to implement it by law.

Shoemaker concluded his remarks by pointing out that members of the legislature "are still struggling, with apparently little chance for success, to provide some type of homestead exemption for our older citizens with limited or fixed incomes." He emphasized that, in his considerel judgment, serious attention to these problems would appear at the present to be far more important than any consideration of salary increases for part-time lawmakers who are required to meet only once in each two years.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wonder what Miami's Fred Foster would have done in a fourth overtime?

Miami nipped Eastern Kentucky 84-82 in three overtimes Wednesday night behind the workhorse performance of Foster.

Foster scored all the Redskins' 10 points in the first overtime and all five in the third extra period. He finished the night with 39 points.

Miami fought from behind to tie the score at 61-61 at the end of regulation on a shot by George Burkhart and went on to even its record at 11-11.

Dayton, meanwhile, wrapped up its ninth straight victory early in the game, as the Flyers trounced St. Joseph's of Indiana 99-66 to keep alive their hopes for a bid to the National Invitational Tournament.

NCAA-bound Bowling Green lost to Virginia Tech 77-71 despite 33 points from the Falcons' Walt Piatkowski. Virginia Tech outmanned Bowling Green on the defensive boards and got a career high 35 points from Glen Combs.

In the only other Ohio game, Central State opened up in an overtime period to defeat Ashland 32-22. Regulation ended 17-17, then Central State decided it had had enough of the slow game. Jim Moore scored eight points in the extra period for the winners. Ashland led at halftime 10-8.

Pirates Get Special Test On Motivation

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Black is to white as night is to: A — Green. B — Day. C — Evening. D — Morning. Pick one.

Psychological testing, long a method for gaining insight into students, job applicants and draftees is being adopted to baseball.

Anxious to learn all they can about their athletes, Pittsburgh officials invited Dr. Tom Tutko, a San Jose State psychologist, to administer a motivational test to the Pirates.

Joe L. Brown, general manager of the Pirates, aid several pro football teams have used the tests, long a favorite of large companies across the country.

"I want to emphasize," said Brown, "that our sixth place finish has nothing to do with our club taking the tests. If we had won every game last year and won the World Series in four games, I still would have suggested the tests."

Mexico City Altitude OK?

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Athletes competing in events that demand short bursts of energy will be unaffected by the 7,300-foot altitude of Mexico City at the Summer Olympics, says Dr. Merritt H. Stiles of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

The Spokane heart specialist, chairman of the Olympic unit's Medical and Training Services Committee, writes in the Feb. 26 issue of Modern Medicine Magazine, however, that "performance will be affected in running, swimming, rowing, padding and cycling events requiring more than two minutes of maximum effort."

Miami Trace Cops Tourney Win, 67-61

The victory gives the Panthers a shot at Greenfield in the finals 8 p. m. Friday. Trace and Greenfield McClain have met twice in South Central Ohio League play, with Trace winning both games.

In last night's tilt, the score was tied, 15-15, at the end of the first quarter. By halftime, Miami Trace held a two point edge, 29-27.

Taking game scoring laurels was Lancaster's Kluz who notched seven field goals and six foul shots for a total of 20.

Trace was the second place team in the South Central Ohio Legue while Greenfield finihed third. Wilmington the league leader, is still in tournament action.

Emile Griffith Ready To Go

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Emile Griffith says he's in great shape. One look at him in action is enough to convince anyone that he's not kidding.

"It's 26½ inches right now and I've never felt better," said Griffith, who defends his world middleweight title against Italy's Nino Benvenuti at Madison Square Garden Monday night.

This will be Griffith's third title fight with Benvenuti. Griffith lost his crown to the tall, stylish Italian last April and regained it in September.

'Hoot' Gibson Goes to Patriots

South Carolina Pushes for Tourney

By TED MEIER

Wouldn't it be something if unranked South Carolina won the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball championship and then was left waiting in the cold outside the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament all because it was placed on probation in 1967 for recruiting violations.

In the ACC are such powers as third ranked North Carolina, whose 20 game winning streak was snapped by South Carolina Wednesday night in an 87-86 upset, and tenth ranked Duke, dumped by South Carolina five days ago 56-50.

When South Carolina was spanked by the NCAA and banned from postseason tournaments or bowl games the suspension was to continue to January of 1969 but officials said the probation might be lifted before then. So far there are no indications this might be done.

But the victories over North Carolina and Duke are a feather in the cap of Coach Frank McGuire and make the Gamecocks a factor to be reckoned with in the ACC tournament next week.

North Carolina is the runaway leader in the conference, but the tournament decides the NCAA bid.

Bob Cremins, a 150-pound 6-foot-3 sophomore from New York City, paced the Gamecocks with a career high of 23 points and 15 rebounds.

Down 46-33 at the half, South Carolina rallied to go ahead by nine points, then held off the Tar Heels' late surge led by Larry Miller with 26 points.

Duke, the only other team in The Associated Press Top Ten to play, rebounded from its South Carolina defeat to whip North Carolina State 71-61 at Raleigh. Mike Lewis led the Blue Devils with 29 points and 18 rebounds.

Calvin Murphy, Niagara's 5-10 soph star, the No. 2 scorer in the nation, was held to his college low of 15 points as the Purple Eagles lost in overtime at home to Syracuse 50-49.

Long Island, the No. 1 small college team in the AP poll, and St. Peters, N.J., each accepted invitations to the National Invitation Tournament, upping the NIT field to seven with seven selections still to come.

The announcement was made at halftime of the Long Island-St. Peters game in Jersey City, N.J. St. Peters then went on to hand Long Island its first defeat of the season 70-59, ending a 20-game winning streak.

In other games involving tournament-bound teams, Oklahoma City of the NIT whipped Centenary 114-95 at home behind Rich Travis' 44 points. Chicago Loyola of the NCAA downed Western Michigan 85-73 at home. Virginia Tech, also at home, downed Bowling Green of the NCAA 77-71.

Boston College, NCAA-bound, scored on the road over Duquesne of the NIT 104-88 in a rough game that saw Moe Barr of the Dukes and Terry Driscoll of Boston College ejected for fighting.

Dayton made it nine straight by clobbering St. Joseph's of Indiana 99-66 at home and Iowa State missed tying Kansas State for the Big Eight lead by losing on the road to Colorado 91-76.

Teays Valley Tangles With Bishop Watterson

Watterson (13-4) edged Westerville last Saturday 54-48, on a strong fourth quarter finish, while the Vikings were romping to an easy win over Franklin Heights.

In other tournament action on tap for Friday, Academy and Canal Winchester play in the sectional finals at Teays Valley while Laurelville meets Crooksville at Nelsonville in sectional semi-final play.

The big game for Pickaway County is Saturday when cross county rivals Westfall and Logan Elm clash on the Teays Valley floor for the right to play in the central district tournament.

WATTERSON won the Central Ohio Catholic League They have good size and should hold a deciding edge in the rebounding department.

However, Coach Russ Gregg will be able to counteract the size of the Watterson cagers with speed and good all-around shooting ability.

Teays Valley, now 9-9 for the season, has improved recently. Against Franklin Heights the Vikings utilized their speed in a full court press which they used for the entire game.

Jim and Dick Barr, and Stan Will have provided the Vikings with good bench strength.

In other action at the coliseum tomorrow, Delaware Hayes will play Columbus Central at 7:30 p. m. and South will meet London at 9 p. m.

Delaware Hayes is coached by Keith Merrin, who for many years guided Logan Elm's basketball teams.

Although Merrin never had losing season at Logan Elm, his first season at Delaware he had an 8-11 record.

Big Crowd Expected for Hockey Tilt

Officials of the Columbus Checkers are anticipating a capacity crowd Sunday when the Checkers host Des Moines at 2:30.

Checkers are presently in fourth place in the International Hockey League, just a point behind third place Toledo and four points ahead of fifth place Fort Wayne.

Gates at the Fairgrounds coliseum will open at 12:30 p. m. and Checkers officials urged Circleville residents planning to attend the game to come before 2 p. m. to be assured of a choice seat.

The Checkers are battling to hold on to their fourth place spot which will give them a shot at the International hockey league playoff.

Warriors Bow To Boston

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Things are going so badly for the crippled San Francisco Warriors that they're even getting hurt by other club's ailments.

The Warriors, with three players sidelined by injuries, bowed to Boston 135-119 in a National Basketball Association game Wednesday night. In the only other NBA game, New York squeezed past Baltimore 126-122.

In the American Basketball Association, Jimmy Rayl led Indiana's double overtime 122-116 victory over Oakland.

Major League Players OK Pact

MIAMI (AP) — Major league players representatives ratified a two-year agreement Wednesday, calling for binding arbitration by the commissioner of baseball in any dispute arising between the 20 clubs and players.

The agreement, agreed to in principle by player representatives and owners a week earlier, also sets the minimum player salary at $10,000—an increase of $3,000—and gives the players a greater voice in contractural matters.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the players' Association, said the player representatives accepted the arbitration clause after agreeing on several procedural changes in the manner of settling grievances.

"We feel that we have tightened up the steps in settling any grievances, subject to the players' approval, before such disputes might come before the commissioner," Miller said.

The players previously had questioned the commissioner's role as an impartial judge, as he is selected by the owners.

Miller said the changes in the uniform players contract prohibits unilateral alterations by club managements during the two-year agreement, ending Dec. 21, 1969, and requires negotiations with the players on any changes after that.

Other measures ratified at the meeting included:

—A study of the reserve clause, which presently binds a player to the club with which he is under contract, to be completed prior to the termination date of the overall agreement.

—A reduction in the allowable salary cut from 25 per cent to 20 per cent of the previous year's contract.

—A $3 hike to $15 in the players' daily regular season meal allowance, an increase from $8 to $12 for daily spring training meals and a boost of miscellaneous spring training disbursements from $25 to $40 a week.

—Adoption of a set of scheduling relations for the 1968-69 seasons, aimed at reducing some of the more unreasonable travel demands on the players.

—The banning of championship or exhibition games during the All-Star break, except for charity purposes. The players selected for the All-Star game would not be required to play in such exhibitions.

—A provision for prompt notification and negotiation with the players' association for player compensation should either the American or National leagues plan divisional playoff games in 1969.

—Provision for moving expenses for players and their families upon promotion from the minors to the majors, between opening day and Sept. 1.

—A joint study on the length of the championship season, to be completed prior to the drawing up of the preliminary schedules for 1969.

Such allowances will continue, as formerly, for players traded on the major league level during the season.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wonder what Miami's Fred Foster would have done in a fourth overtime?

Miami nipped Eastern Kentucky 84-82 in three overtimes Wednesday night behind the workhorse performance of Foster.

Foster scored all the Redskins' 10 points in the first overtime and all five in the third extra period. He finished the night with 39 points.

Miami fought from behind to tie the score at 61-61 at the end of regulation on a shot by George Burkhart and went on to even its record at 11-11.

Dayton, meanwhile, wrapped up its ninth straight victory early in the game, as the Flyers trounced St. Joseph's of Indiana 99-66 to keep alive their hopes for a bid to the National Invitational Tournament.

Don May led all scorers with 27 points.

NCAA-bound Bowling Green lost to Virginia Tech 77-71 despite 33 points from the Falcons' Walt Piatkowski. Virginia Tech outmanned Bowling Green on the defensive boards and got a career high 35 points from Glen Combs.

In the only other Ohio game, Central State opened up in an overtime period to defeat Ashland 32-22. Regulation ended 17-17, then Central State decided it had had enough of the slow game. Jim Moore scored eight points in the extra period for the winners. Ashland led at halftime 10-8.

Black is to white as night is to: A — Green. B — Day. C — Evening. D — Morning. Pick one.

Psychological testing, long a method for gaining insight into students, job applicants and draftees is being adopted to baseball.

Anxious to learn all they can about their athletes, Pittsburgh officials invited Dr. Tom Tutko, a San Jose State psychologist, to administer a motivational test to the Pirates.

Joe L. Brown, general manager of the Pirates, aid several pro football teams have used the tests, long a favorite of large companies across the country.

"I want to emphasize," said Brown, "that our sixth place finish has nothing to do with our club taking the tests. If we had won every game last year and won the World Series in four games, I still would have suggested the tests."

Mexico City Altitude OK?

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Athletes competing in events that demand short bursts of energy will be unaffected by the 7,300-foot altitude of Mexico City at the Summer Olympics, says Dr. Merritt H. Stiles of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

The Spokane heart specialist, chairman of the Olympic unit's Medical and Training Services Committee, writes in the Feb. 26 issue of Modern Medicine Magazine, however, that "performance will be affected in running, swimming, rowing, padding and cycling events requiring more than two minutes of maximum effort."

Emile Griffith Ready To Go

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Emile Griffith says he's in great shape. One look at him in action is enough to convince anyone that he's not kidding.

Showgirls hate him when they see his narrow waist. Musclemen turn green with envy when they look at his broad shoulders and bulging biceps.

"It's 26½ inches right now and I've never felt better," said Griffith, who defends his world middleweight title against Italy's Nino Benvenuti at Madison Square Garden Monday night.

This will be Griffith's third title fight with Benvenuti. Griffith lost his crown to the tall, stylish Italian last April and regained it in September.

South Carolina Pushes for Tourney

By TED MEIER

Wouldn't it be something if unranked South Carolina won the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball championship and then was left waiting in the cold outside the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament all because it was placed on probation in 1967 for recruiting violations.

In the ACC are such powers as third ranked North Carolina, whose 20 game winning streak was snapped by South Carolina Wednesday night in an 87-86 upset, and tenth ranked Duke, dumped by South Carolina five days ago 56-50.

When South Carolina was spanked by the NCAA and banned from postseason tournaments or bowl games the suspension was to continue to January of 1969 but officials said the probation might be lifted before then. So far there are no indications this might be done.

But the victories over North Carolina and Duke are a feather in the cap of Coach Frank McGuire and make the Game cocks a factor to be reckoned with in the ACC tournament next week.

North Carolina is the runaway leader in the conference, but the tournament decides the NCAA bid.

Bob Cremins, a 150-pound 6-foot-3 sophomore from New York City, paced the Gamecocks with a career high of 23 points and 15 rebounds.

Down 46-33 at the half, South Carolina rallied to go ahead by nine points, then held off the Tar Heels' late surge led by Larry Miller with 26 points.

Duke, the only other team in The Associated Press Top Ten to play, rebounded from its South Carolina defeat to whip North Carolina State 71-61 at Raleigh. Mike Lewis led the Blue Devils with 29 points and 18 rebounds.

Calvin Murphy, Niagara's 5-10 soph star, the No. 2 scorer in the nation, was held to his college low of 15 points as the Purple Eagles lost in overtime at home to Syracuse 59-49.

Long Island, the No. 1 small college team in the AP poll, and St. Peters, N.J., each accepted invitations to the National Invitation Tournament, upping the NIT field to seven with seven selections still to come.

The announcement was made at halftime of the Long Island-St. Peters game in Jersey City, N.J. St. Peters then went on to hand Long Island its first defeat of the season 70-59, ending a 20-game winning streak.

In other games involving tournament-bound teams, Oklahoma City of the NIT whipped Centenary 114-95 at home behind Rich Travis' 44 points. Chicago Loyola of the NCAA downed Western Michigan 85-73 at home. Virginia Tech, also at home, downed Bowling Green of the NCAA 77-71.

Boston College, NCAA-bound, scored on the road over Duquesne of the NIT 104-88 in a rough game that saw Moe Barr of the Dukes and Terry Driscoll of Boston College ejected for fighting.

Dayton made it nine straight by clobbering St. Joseph's of Indiana 99-66 at home and Iowa state missed tying Kansas State for the Big Eight lead by losing on the road to Colorado 91-76.

Teays Valley Tangles With Bishop Watterson

Watterson (13-4) edged Westerville last Saturday 54-48, on a strong fourth quarter finish, while the Vikings were romping to an easy win over Franklin Heights.

In other tournament action on tap for Friday, Academy and Canal Winchester play in the sectional finals at Teays Valley while Laurelville meets Crooksville at Nelsonville in sectional semi-final play.

The big game for Pickaway County is Saturday when cross county rivals Westfall and Logan Elm clash on the Teays Valley floor for the right to play in the central district tournament.

WATTERSON won the Central Ohio Catholic League They have good size and should hold a deciding edge in the rebounding department.

However, Coach Russ Gregg will be able to counteract the size of the Watterson cagers with speed and good all-around shooting ability.

Teays Valley, now 9-9 for the season, has improved recently. Against Franklin Heights the Vikings utilized their speed in a full court press which they used for the entire game.

Jim and Dick Barr, and Stan Will have provided the Vikings with good bench strength.

In other action at the coliseum tomorrow, Delaware Hayes will play Columbus Central at 7:30 p. m. and South will meet London at 9 p. m.

Delaware Hayes is coached by Keith Merrin, who for many years guided Logan Elm's basketball teams.

Although Merrin never had losing season at Logan Elm, his first season at Delaware he had an 8-11 record.

Big Crowd Expected for Hockey Tilt

Officials of the Columbus Checkers are anticipating a capacity crowd Sunday when the Checkers host Des Moines at 2:30.

Checkers are presently in fourth place in the International Hockey League, just a point behind third place Toledo and four points ahead of fifth place Fort Wayne.

Gates at the Fairgrounds coliseum will open at 12:30 p. m. and Checkers officials urged Circleville residents planning to attend the game to come before 2 p. m. to be assured of a choice seat.

The Checkers are battling to hold on to their fourth place spot which will give them a shot at the International hockey league playoff.

Warriors Bow To Boston

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Things are going so badly for the crippled San Francisco Warriors that they're even getting hurt by other club's ailments.

The Warriors, with three players sidelined by injuries, bowed to Boston 135-110 in a National Basketball Association game Wednesday night. In the only other NBA game, New York squeezed past Baltimore 126-122.

In the American Basketball Association, Jimmy Rayl led Indiana's double overtime 122-116 victory over Oakland.

Major League Players OK Pact

MIAMI (AP) — Major league players representatives ratified a two-year agreement Wednesday, calling for binding arbitration by the commissioner of baseball in any dispute arising between the 20 clubs and players.

The agreement, agreed to in principle by player representatives and owners a week earlier, also sets the minimum player salary at $10,000—an increase of $3,000—and gives the players a greater voice in contractural matters.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the players' Association, said the player representatives accepted the arbitration clause after agreeing on several procedural changes in the manner of settling grievances.

"We feel that we have tightened up the steps in settling any grievances, subject to the players' approval, before such disputes might come before the commissioner," Miller said.

The players previously had questioned the commissioner's role as an impartial judge, as he is selected by the owners.

Miller said the changes in the uniform players contract prohibits unilateral alterations by club managements during the two-year agreement, ending Dec. 21, 1969, and requires negotiation with the players on any changes after that.

Other measures ratified at the meeting included:

—A reduction in the allowable salary cut from 25 per cent to 20 per cent of the previous year's contract.

—A $3 hike to $15 in the players' daily regular season meal allowance, an increase from $8 to $12 for daily spring training meals and a boost of miscellaneous spring training disbursements from $25 to $40 a week.

—Adoption of a set of scheduling relations for the 1968-69 seasons, aimed at reducing some of the more unreasonable travel demands on the players.

—The banning of championship or exhibition games during the All-Star break, except for charity purposes. The players selected for the All-Star game would not be required to play in such exhibitions.

—A provision for prompt notification and negotiation with the players' association for player compensation should either the American or National leagues plan divisional playoff games in 1969.

—Provision for moving expenses for players and their families upon promotion from the minors to the majors, between opening day and Sept. 1.

—A joint study on the length of the championship season, to be completed prior to the drawing up of the preliminary sched-

Such allowances will continue, as formerly, for players traded on the major league level during the season.

Long Island U Still First In Small College Cage Poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Election day in The Associated Press' final small-college basketball poll of the season will be held next week and a lot probably will depend on what happens this Saturday night.

Three of the top five ranking teams will end their regular campaigns then. LIU, the leader picked for the NIT Wednesday night, goes against another NIT-bound team, Duquesne. Kentucky Wesleyan, No. 2, plays Tennessee-Martin while Illinois State, No. 5, takes on Wayne State.

Third-ranked Pan American and Southwestern Louisiana, in fourth place, already have completed their seasons.

LIU's spread is not insurmountable. The Blackbirds lead Kentucky Wesleyan by 27 points. They accumulated 152 points, including 80 for eight first-place votes, in the latest poll based on games through last Saturday.

Kentucky Wesleyan had 125 points and was named the top team on three ballots. A total of 17 sports writers and broadcasters on a national panel participated in the balloting, which was based on 10 points for a first-place vote, 9 for second, 8 for third, etc.

Evansville held sixth place followed in order by McNeese State, Norfolk State, Trinity, Tex., and Indiana State.

Indiana State is the only new team in the Top Ten. Guilford, beaten by Elon, and Lenoir Rhyne, dropped out.

The Top Ten with first-place votes in parentheses and total points through games of Feb. 24 on a 10-9-8-etc. basis:

1. Long Island U. (8)	152
2. Kentucky Wesleyan (3)	125
3. Pan American	90
4. Southwestern La. (2)	88
5. Illinois State (1)	68
6. Evansville (1)	62
7. McNeese State	61
8. Norfolk State (1)	49
9. Trinity, Tex.	29
10. Indiana State	27

Blues Earn Tie with Canadiens

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dickie Moore went through enough Montreal rallies in 11 great National Hockey League seasons with the Canadiens to know how they get started.

Moore, who now earns his salary with St. Louis in the NHL's expansion West Division, carried over his knowledge to Wednesday night.

It was Moore's third period goal that started a three-goal spurt for the fired up Blues and earned them a 3-3 tie with the Canadiens.

In other games, rookie Bob Schmautz' first NHL goal have Chicago a 1-0 victory over Toronto and Oakland easily bested Minnesota 6-3 on the West Coast.

Reds Without Second Baseman

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds have yet to sign a second baseman for the 1968 season, with only hours remaining until March 1 when unsigned players are officially declared holdouts.

Tommy Helms, who played second most of last season for the Reds, walked into training camp Wednesday and left in quite a hurry.

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP)— Only one pin separated brothers-in-law Norm Meyers of Whittier, Calif., and Dick Weber of St. Louis at the end of the first round Wednesday in the Professional Bowlers Association's $50,000 Buckeye Open.

Meyers, who last won a title at Seattle in 1964, leads the pack with a total of 2,717 for the first 12 games. Weber, the PBA's all-time money winner, is right behind at 2,716.

Alvin Dark Eyes Possible Lineups

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Alvin Dark will take a good look before he decides who will play where this season.

The Cleveland Indians' manager has two exceptions, besides four starting pitchers. They are first baseman Tony Horton and third baseman Max Alvis.

Dark will look long and hard during the next few weeks of spring training and said Wednesday: "I'll play the guys I think give us the best ball club on any given day."

YMCA Slates Skin Diving Instruction

The YMCA of Lancaster and Fairfield County is announcing the annual Skin and Scuba Diving Classes which will begin March 13.

Classes will be held twice a week with lectures on Mondays and instruction in pool on Wednesdays at the YMCA 8-10 p. m. Enroll now for this underwater sport.

The instructors for the course are Larry Tipple and Royce Englander well qualified in training individuals in Skin and Scuba Diving.

The course will consist of skin diving for youth both boys and girls ages 12-16 and scuba diving for men and women ages 17 and up. Skin diving consists of the proper use of snorkle, fins and face masks. Scuba diving includes use of tanks of compressed air, a connecting hose and regulator, face mask and flipper.

Prerequisites for this course are that each individual will need a medical exam form completed by a physician on or before March 12. After enrolling in the course, each person will be given a water test and must pass a mark on March 13 to be eligible for the whole course. The water test includes treading water (no hands) for three minutes, swim 300 yards, tow an inert swimmer 40 yards, float 10 minutes and swim 50 feet under water.

The fee for the course will be $4 to YMCA members and $16 for non-members. The fee covers use of air in tanks and course fee. Course will last until May 15, with meetings every Monday and Wednesday evenings. Every member will also be asked to supply their own snorkel, fins, and face mask by the third lesson.

If you plan to take a vacation where you will be doing a lot of swimming and would like to explore the uderwater world, enroll now and become a YMCA certified skin and scuba diver. To register call the YMCA office, 654-0616.

Vietnam Military Situation Critical Yet Indecisive

by WILLIAM L. RYAN and PETER ARNETT

SAIGON (AP) — It is hard to escape the conclusion that the military situation in Vietnam has come to a critical yet indecisive stage.

The Communists still press the initiative they seized with the first shots of the winter-spring offensive, fired at the border town of Loc Ninh in late October.

Thousands of U.S. troops are bogged down in the stalemate of the Khe Sanh and demilitarized zone sectors. Bloody battles are expected in these regions, and there is little reason to expect that these engagements will be any more conclusive than those of the past. The Khe Sanh situation is developing into one in which allied prestige is laid on the line.

The Red offensive has forced the allies to the defensive in Vietnam. U.S. troops are squeezed around cities. The countryside is open to Viet Cong recruiters who, say informed sources, quickly fill ranks depleted by allied firepower in battle.

A senior U.S. officer commented recently that it was not the time for an allied offensive because an offensive posture "might give the enemy opportunity to penetrate our lines."

Gen. William C. Westmoreland conceded last weekend: "The Viet Cong-North Vietnamese attacks have indeed taxed the flexibility and mobility of our forces."

One Westmoreland answer to the current situation, as to similar crises in the past including the dark days of early 1965 when the Vietnamese army was in danger of being wiped out, is to ask for more U.S. troops. "With additional troops we could more effectively deny the enemy his objectives," he said.

The first U.S. combat troops were committed to forestall a military defeat. Today, three years and 500,000 troops later, the enemy is again in a position to threaten the cities.

The most experienced observers see Westmoreland needing at least five more divisions immediately to win back the initiative. If enemy capability continues to increase at the rate of the past three years, even the new U.S. troop deployment could be nullified within a year, these observers say.

Gen. Westmoreland says he bases hopes for a U.S. troop commitment on modernization and increased capability of the ARVN, the South Vietnamese army. But information from a dozen battle areas indicates ARVN performance in recent weeks has been uneven at best.

"In most cases their back was to the wall," said one U.S. adviser. "They generally fought well in the city of Ben Tre."

That is in the delta, and the South Vietnamese were fighting for their own town.

In Ben Tre, Vinh Long, My Tho and Can Tho in the delta, fighter-bombers and artillery had to be used to blast enemy troops out of large areas.

One possible reason for Vietnamese reluctance to mix with the enemy was the absence of half the ARVN forces on Tet leave. What units remained fought well. A small armed group in the Mekong Delta town of Tra Vinh moved in on a Viet Cong company that had occupied the province headquarters without firing a shot and killed them all. A regional-force company near the Saigon race track beat off an attack by a North Vietnamese battlion. U.S. infntrymen termed it a skillful and courageous performance.

There is no question the Communist offensive damaged the pacification program—latest in a series of plans to establish a lasting government presence in the countryside. If pacification was a major objective in the offensive, as some suggest, the Communists could claim a success almost by defaul

In 13 provinces, the Vietnamese regular battalions assigned to protect pacification regions were pulled out to help defend cities and district towns, U.S. officials reported. Throughout the country nearly half the 555 Revolutionary Development teams assigned to work in and protect top-priority hamlets also were pulled out. U.S. officials say the pacification program suffered seriously in 13 of the nation's 44 provinces, moderately in 16, and slightly in 15.

Security vacuums were created by withdrawal of regular ARVN battalions and Revolutionary Development teams. The Communists are actively recruiting and propagandizing against the Saigon government in such areas, and to refill those vacuums with government influece may take months.

The Communists, perhaps deliberately, bypassed priority pacification regions but by hammering at administrative urban centers disrupted effective government functions. People were cut off from towns. Communists could roam at will among the population.

In coastal Binh Dinh Province, cradle of the pacification program, U.S. officials are openly depressed. The Communists there are known to have entered hamlets considered to be pacified, destroying laboriously built schools and clinics.

"It's all gone down the drain," said one American, recounting the inroads made in Tuy Phuoc district, long a pacification showcase.

Seventeen of Binh Dinh's 31 Revolutionary Development teams were withdrawn to towns to meet the Communist attacks. Many local militiamen were pulled out of hamlets, and the program in U.S. estimation has been set back at least 18 months —providing the Communists do not launch a new wave of offensives in that period.

"All they have to do is launch a similar offensive once each year, and we'll never get off the ground," said one official.

Top Americans say there is no doubt that the size of the 1968 program must be considerably scaled down now, and objectives reconsidered.

Draft Laws Explained

EDITOR'S NOTE: In an effort to create a greater public understanding of the laws and regulations governing the induction of personnel into the Armed Forces, the Selective Service System has prepared a series of pertinent questions and corresponding responses concerning provisions of the draft law. Here is another in the series.

Q. If a registrant mails in his registration care to National Headquarters, would he be considered delinquent by his local Board for not having it in his possession?

A. Where he mails (or leaves) his Registration Certificate is immaterial. The infraction of law is the consequence of not having it in his possession. Whether he will be processed as a delinquent depends upon many related circumstances and is a decision that will be made by his Local Board.

Q. Where is the decision made for the conscientious objector who is unable to serve because of a physical defect?

A. A conscientious objector's physical acceptability is determined on the basis of standards applied by the Armed Forces for registrants who are not conscientious objectors. Normally, this decision is made at one of the Armed Forces Examining and Entrance Stations.

Q. Our high school class will soon be studying the Selective Service System. Where might I obtain some information on this subject?

A. Information, including free publications, concerning the Selective Service System may be obtained from any Local Board, State Headquarters or National Headquarters of the System. Additionally, many libraries have reference material in this regard.

Priest Slays Other Priest

MANILA (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest who shot and killed another priest during a quarrel over parish funds was sentenced today to 8 to 17 years in prison.

The Rev. Jose Sison Estrada was found guilty of homicide and illegal possession of a firearm by a local court. The shooting occurred in 1965 in Pangasinan province, northwest of Manila.

The victim was the Rev. Isidro Estrada, but the priests were not related.

Father Estrada was also fined $250 for possessing an unlicensed gun and was ordered to pay damages to his victim's heirs. He was out on bail while his lawyer arranged an appeal.

$508,351 In Precious Metal Stolen

NEW YORK (AP) — Two men with forged documents—one wearing a guard's uniform and carrying a revolver in a holster—conned employes at a cargo building at Kennedy airport out of two crates of the rare metal palladium valued at $508,351.

A panel truck pulled up at the cargo building, and two men stepped out. One identified himself to the staff as a representative of Engelhard Industries Inc., a metals firm in Newark, N.J.

The men had what looked like all the necessary credentials—including a bill of lading—to pick up the crates for the Newark firm, to which the shipment had been sent by a firm in Amsterdam, Holland.

The 11 square blocks of palladium—which is similar to platinum—were loaded into the panel truck. The men signed receipts for the crates and drove away.

Hours later a real representative of the Engelhard firm showed up in a company truck with a company guard to pick up the palladium, which had been shipped from the Soviet Union to the Amsterdam firm which sold it to Engelhard.
